HURRICANE IONE BLOWS TO SEA, LEAVES 5 DEAD IN N. CAROLINA

That State Hardest Hit, With Damage in Millions — Threat to Northeast Area Is Lifted.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 20 (AP)—Hurricane Ione whirled well out to sea on an eastward course today and virtually all remaining threat to the metropolitan northeast was lifted.

The devastation of the season's ninth tropical storm was visited mainly on North Carolina where five lives were lost and property and crop damage ran well up in the millions.

Virginia, which expected heavy damage, escaped almost unscathed except for crop losses due to heavy rain.

Ione's winds, once 120 miles an hour, diminished nearly by half. The storm spun uncertainly for several hours off Norfolk early today and then veered out over the open sea.

The 11 a.m. weather bureau advisory put Ione's position 210 miles east of Norfolk. The storm was moving eastward at about 20 miles an hour.

By 2 p.m. the storm was reported 260 miles east northeast of Norfolk, with its speed and its course unchanged.

Storm Warnings Down.
All storm warnings south of Block Island to Cape Hatteras were ordered down, including those in Chesapeake and Delaware bays. The alert remained in effect from Block Island to Provincetown, Mass.

As early as 8 a.m. the diminished hurricane had moved over the Atlantic out of range of shore-based radar. Then its position was put at 90 miles northeast of Norfolk with its eastward movement put at 10 to 12 miles an hour. Aircraft later got a better fix indicating it was much farther out.

Highest winds near the center were 60 to 75 miles an hour, and the area of gale winds extended for 300 miles in the eastern semicircle and 100 miles to the west.

New York Is Safe.
The New York metropolitan area will escape the force of the hurricane almost completely, with "very little rain" and winds not likely to go above 30 miles an hour.

In Washington, Conrad P. Mook, meteorologist in charge of the emergency warning center, said that in order for the storm to become a threat to New England there would have to be "a radical change" in course.

North Carolina was hit with heavy rains and most of the damage there appeared to be from high water according to early reports, though a complete picture was being delayed by disrupted communications.

Ione, showing many of the stop-and-go characteristics of hurricane Connie, which inflicted tremendous damage last month, moved up the Carolina coast at 12 to 15 miles an hour yesterday afternoon—then almost stopped about 23 miles south of Norfolk.

It took the storm nearly seven hours to reach this point area between 4 and 5 a.m. Its arrival, originally expected to coincide with high water at 11 p.m., was so delayed that tides in Hampton Roads reached only three feet above normal. Winds gusted no higher than 58 m.p.h. and averaged only 35 to 47 m.p.h.

When it passed, the eye was well offshore and the Norfolk area received winds from the inner fringe.

Only negligible damage was reported here.

Preliminary reports from the

EAST SIDE MAYOR ASKED TO CLOSE WORTMAN CLUB

Police Commissioner
Requests Action, Says
Terrace Lounge Is a Nuisance.

Police Commissioner Russell T. Beebe of East St. Louis today asked Mayor Alvin G. Fields to close Frank (Buster) Wortman's Terrace Lounge, night club at 127 Collinsville avenue.

Beebe, in a letter to Fields, said the police department has had nothing but trouble with the Terrace Lounge, which has been the scene of numerous fights and violent clashes.

The police commissioner suggested that Fields had the power to close the night club as a nuisance, since the mayor serves as East St. Louis excise commissioner in behalf of the state.

Beebe's recommendation that the Terrace Lounge be closed came while the Federal Bureau of Investigation and police are searching for Tony DiMartino, manager of the night club.

U.S. COMMENT ON ARMS RACE REPORT AWAITED BY SYMINGTON

Senator Seeks Defense Department Reaction to Story That Reds Soon May Lead in Atomic Weapons.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—Senator Stuart Symington (Dem., Missouri), is awaiting comment by the Department of Defense on a report that Soviet Russia is overcoming the United States lead in the air-atomic weapons race and that Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson is seeking cuts in research and development funds.

The report appeared yesterday in a column by Joseph Alsop, who quoted conclusions of a high-level study group headed by Dr. James E. Killian Jr. of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The secret report was said to be before the National Security Council.

In Fraser, Colo., Murray Snyder, assistant White House press secretary, said "the substance of the story" that the American lead may become a Soviet lead in the period 1960 to 1965 is "inaccurate." Snyder said also that the Killian report had been submitted to President Eisenhower but that an evaluation of it by the President's staff had not been completed.

A Defense Department spokesman said today there was no official comment on the Alsop story.

It was learned that the Killian report is classified top secret, and that no congressional committees have received copies. It is understood that the report has been made available to the Office of Defense Mobilization in addition to the N.S.C.

Recalls June 20 Speech.

Symington, a former Secretary of the Air Force and a member of the Armed Services Committee, said he had not seen the Killian report but that if Alsop reflected accurately the conclusions of the document the views expressed coincided with his own.

The Senator pointed out that last June 20 he asserted in a speech that the Soviets were well ahead of the United States in the development of intercontinental ballistic missiles. He said that of the five chief categories of air power the Russians were ahead in two others, and that the United States was ahead in one. More than a year ago he expressed concern over the narrowing gap in the American lead.

Symington noted Alsop had said Wilson was calling for a decrease of $200,000,000 in research and development funds despite the fact that Trevor Gardner, Air Force special assistant for research and development, had called for an increase of $300,000,000.

"Not enough emphasis is being placed in the intercontinental ballistic missile, the ultimate weapon of our time," Symington said. "This business of usual approach is serious and wrong. I predict there will be a searching inquiry next year as to why there is a current effort to reduce our defense expenditures while Congress is not in session."

Influenced by Cocktails?

Symington wondered, at a press conference he called to discuss a variety of subjects, whether "a few Russian cocktail parties have led us to gamble that we can now afford the luxury of a second-best Air Force." By this he meant, he said, that he was in favor of improved relations with Soviet Russia, as typified by the Russian "new look" in diplomacy, but that nothing had occurred to justify the United States in "lowering its guard."

Symington declined to comment on the President's plan for an exchange of military blueprints with Soviet Russia and mutual aerial inspection by Russia and the United States to prevent surprise attack. He said he would favor anything that provides foolproof inspection but did not know how far the President's plan would go in that direction.

Comment on Farm Prices.

Turning to another subject, Symington said the farm situation in Missouri "is unsatisfactory" and that if Mr. Eisenhower had to run for re-election today he would lose Missouri because of farmers' discontent over prices. Mr. Eisenhower carried the state by 29,599 votes in 1952. Farmers generally voted Democratic, however.

The Senator also said the chances for the re-election of Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem., St. Louis) would be improved next year by the farm situation. No substantial opposition to Hennings, whose term expires next year, has developed.

Symington will begin a long fall schedule of speeches and appearances with an address at a township meeting in Heman Park, University City, Thursday night.

He will be in Columbia, Mo., Sept. 26; in Kansas City Sept. 27; and 28 and in Chicago Sept. 29. He will be in St. Louis for the Valley Prophet festivities Sept. 1 at Caruthersville, Mo., Oct. 1 to St. Louis Oct. 11; in St. Joseph Oct. 16; in Kansas City Oct. 18; in Kirkwood Oct. 19; in St. Louis Oct. 20; in Columbia again Oct. 24; in Kansas City again Oct. 28; and in Indianapolis Oct. 31.

tioned again," she said. Miss Middleton said she was given Red Cross cigarettes but was afraid to accept them because the Communists would think she was a spy accepting a gift from the United States Government.

Miss Middleton said she and Miss Perkins were separated for two years but on Sunday when they were allowed to walk together in a courtyard they did not speak because of fear of their Communist captors.

Miss Middleton said the jail was very cold in winter because the windows were kept open and that they had only ice water for bathing.

Once when she had a toothache the Communists gave her some "wonderful medicine," she said, but she refused to let them extract the tooth because her suspicions were aroused again.

"They had quite a time with me because I was so stubborn," she said.

EGYPT WITHDRAWS TROOPS 528 YARDS ALONG GAZA STRIP

CAIRO, Sept. 20 (AP)—Prime Minister Gamal Abdel Nasser announced today Egypt has ordered its troops to withdraw at least 500 meters (528 yards) from the Israeli-Egyptian demarcation line along the Gaza coastal strip.

He said the order was in response to a U.N. Security Council resolution on easing tension in the area.

Nasser said the Egyptians also are setting up barbed wire barriers on some vital positions inside Egyptian-controlled territory. Between the barbed wire barriers, Egyptian forces will have full authority to prevent infiltration.

Nasser said the action was taken after Egyptian talks last week with U.N. chief truce observer Maj. Gen. Edson L. M. Burns of Canada.

Wiley Charges Politics in New Reserve Program

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (UPI)—Senator Alexander Wiley (Rep., Wisconsin) charged yesterday that the Defense Department is "playing politics" with the new military reserve program. He called for an investigation by the Senate Armed Services Committee asserting that the reserve program "is too important to play politics with sites for training."

Wiley did not elaborate on his "politics" charge. But he said the department is locating combat training camps in the South and that it is unrealistic to train men in mild climates when they may be called on to fight in such bitter cold areas as Korea. He said the military "apparently learned very little" from the Korean war.

He also said the Defense Department should not request any new funds for reserve training camps "until proper use is made of existing facilities."

KHRUSHCHEV HINTS OF NEW PEACE MOVES

Contingent on West Matching Recent Concrete Actions to Ease Cold War.

LONDON, Sept. 20 (AP)—Nikita S. Khrushchev was quoted by the Moscow radio today as saying that if the West will match what he called Russia's recent concrete actions to ease the cold war, there will be "new proposals on our part."

The broadcast said the Soviet Communist party boss made the statement in talks yesterday with leaders from Communist East Germany. The nature of the new proposals he mentioned was not specified.

The Berlin radio announced that the Russians and East Germans today signed a treaty granting "real sovereignty" to the Communist satellite.

Temporary Measure.

Discussing a decision to maintain Russian army garrisons in East Germany, which he described as a temporary measure, Khrushchev said: "We shall, together with you, persistently strive for agreement among the states to reduce armed forces in general and to withdraw Soviet, American, British and French troops from Germany."

"Had the U.S.A., Britain and France been prepared to do it today, then we could have settled the question here and now."

"We entertain hopes for settlement of this question in the future. The Geneva conference of the heads of government of the four powers gave rise to these hopes."

"We hope that the spirit of Geneva will develop and strengthen... In the form of concrete actions, as was the case with us when we decided to reduce our armed forces by 640,000 men and when we renounced our right to lease the naval base in Porkkala, Finland, and carried out a number of other measures."

"We expect our partners from Geneva will follow suit, which could be followed by new proposals on our part."

Khrushchev declared "under no circumstances" will the U.S.S.R. agree to a united Germany being a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Peaceful Purposes.

He said Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany said in the recent Moscow negotiations that NATO was set up for peaceful purposes "but we know only too well that the Paris agreements are military agreements."

"NATO is not a sports organization," Khrushchev said. "It was not created for preparing sports competitions nor for playing football. It is known that Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther has never been on the list of football team coaches. Everybody knows him as a general who trains teams for war."

Premier Bulganin said the new pact with East Germany would "confirm that the German democratic republic (Red East Germany) is free to settle herself the questions of foreign and domestic policies, including relations with the German

Railroads Urge Changes in Laws They Say Favor Trucks, Barges

Spokesman for Major Carriers Assails 'Fair Share' Concept of Traffic Followed by ICC.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—A spokesman for major railroads today urged changes in basic transportation laws which he said have created an "intolerable situation" benefiting truck and barge carriers.

J. Carter Fort of Washington, vice president and general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, told a House Commerce subcommittee the association supports in general recommendations of a presidential advisory committee on transportation policy.

The subcommittee is holding hearings on the committee's report preliminary to possible action in the next session of Congress to revise transportation regulatory policy.

The railroads' representative assailed particularly the present policy, as administered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which says that a regulated carrier may not establish rates so low that they will attract more than what the ICC regards as a "fair share" of the available traffic.

Cites Lower Costs.

"When the railroads have an inherent advantage of lower costs," Fort asked, "why should they be denied the right to publish a reduced rate, if it is compensatory, merely because this may have an adverse effect on a competing form of transportation?"

Fort supported the advisory committee's recommendation providing, in effect, that a regulated carrier shall not be barred from establishing a competitive rate merely because of its effect on another form of transportation.

Declaring the present provision works a "particular hardship on railroads," Fort said nearly two thirds of the intercity traffic carried on highways and nine tenths of that moving on the Mississippi river and related waterways is not regulated by the ICC.

The fair share concept, Fort said, "deprives the public of economies which, in the absence of such restraints, would result from the distribution of traffic in accord with the inherent advantages of each of the several types of carriers."

On the other hand, James F. Pinney, general counsel of the American Trucking Association, Inc., predicted that "chaos" would result if the Government discarded "the wealth of administrative and judicial precedent" built up around present policy.

Pinney contended that the advisory committee's report would have the effect of stimulating price wars among the railroads, trucks and other freight carriers, adding that "the prospects for discriminatory rate making... are overwhelming."

If carriers were permitted to establish rates solely at their discretion, it is inevitable that competitively-made rates would favor the large shipper, the large producing and consuming communities and the commodities moving in heavy volume as against the small shipper, the small community and the commodity which moves in small volume," he said.

He predicted that if the committee's recommendations were put into effect the railroads would be able to wreck their trucking competitors and gain a monopoly.

Weeks Favors Proposals.

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, the first witness, testified yesterday that the proposed policy changes would strengthen national defense and provide better, cheaper service. He said there was no intention of abandoning Government regulation of railroads and other carriers or of abolishing the ICC.

Weeks is chairman of a presidential advisory committee on transportation policy and organization.

Weeks said the common carriers were the backbone of the nation's transportation system and something should be done to halt the deterioration he said they had been suffering.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, a member of the presidential committee, stressed the Administration's hope of strengthening the financial position of all modes of transportation, so that they can build their physical equipment into healthy condition with "some degree of excess capacity" which would be available in a mobilization.

Argentines, Used to Being Bossed By Peron, Wonder What's Ahead

People Are Confused, Uncertain of Future, Will Have to Learn Art of Self-Government.

By BRUCE HENDERSON

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 20 (AP)—A labor leader ran his finger across his neck.

"What happens now?" he said. A young Argentine girl said, "the little things count so much. Those little fears we were fighting against."

These were fragments of the reaction which ran through this capital last night and today, after the downfall of Juan Domingo Peron, Argentina's self-styled "leader."

What fears were the rebels fighting? The young anti-Peronista girl spoke seriously: "We couldn't say what we thought for fear of being arrested. You were afraid of going to jail, and staying there indefinitely. You spoke in whispers, or not at all."

"And when you went abroad you were embarrassed. You were an Argentine, and it was your president. It was a stigma we carried. Those are what you might call the little things that are so important in life."

Who will grasp the loose reins? What new road will this richest of Latin lands take?

Crowds laughed at the cold, slashing rain. Some bareheaded, they skipped through rain puddles, kissing and embracing, waving flags in damp but triumphant parades. The blue and white flag of Argentina broke out of windows lining the streets.

Militant groups broke into Peronista precinct headquarters scattered around the city and ripped pictures of Peron and his late wife, Eva, from the walls.

Although Peron's supporters were not in sight, his influence was not completely gone.

Argentina had known Peron, and only Peron, for all these years. His pictures and his words would not be torn down in a day.

Argentines, untutored in guiding their own political fortunes, must learn the ways of self-government anew. In a nation still tied to the past, the first few hours of the future were confused and beset by doubt and uncertainty.

GRAVOIS TEST OF REVERSIBLE TRAFFIC LANES STARTS MONDAY

Four Lanes for Outbound Autos From 4 to 6 P.M. — Setup to Be Reversed in Morning Rush Hours.

The city's experiment with reversible lanes to speed flow of traffic on Gravois avenue during rush hours will begin Monday afternoon. From 4 to 6 p.m. the six-lane thoroughfare will be divided by rubber cones into four lanes for automobiles moving away from the downtown section and two lanes for inbound machines.

This setup will be reversed during the morning rush the following day. From 7 to 9 a.m. four lanes will be set aside for inbound traffic and two for outbound machines.

During non-rush hours, Traffic Commissioner Charles G. Genter explained, the usual system providing three lanes for traffic in each direction will prevail.

Between Geyer, Chippewa, the reversible plan will be in force during rush hours on that section of Gravois between Geyer and Chippewa streets. Two types of black-and-yellow rubber cones will be used to separate the four-lane from the two-lane section. Cones 18 inches tall will be set up along the dividing line between intersections, and 28-inch cones bearing the instruction, "Drive to right," will be placed at intersections.

Genter said the city has 700 of the smaller cones on hand for the experiment, and a shipment of 100 tall cones was to be delivered today.

Two specially equipped trucks manned by a crew of three men will be used each day to set out the cones before the rush period and remove them afterward. The trucks will start on their rounds 30 minutes before each rush period.

Extra policemen will be on hand to help direct traffic and familiarize motorists with the plan, particularly along sections of Gravois where concrete pylons are embedded in the center of the street.

The experiment is designed to forestall bottlenecks after the Third Street Interregional Highway is put into service next month, increasing the volume of traffic on Gravois. If the trial proves successful, the city will consider removal of 47 concrete pylons.

P.S. Co. Plan Favored. The Chamber of Commerce board of directors yesterday recommended that a much more drastic plan proposed by St. Louis Public Service Co. be given a trial.

This plan would apply the reversible flow system during rush hours to three arteries, one extending from Twelfth and Market streets along Twelfth and Gravois to Hampton avenue, a second from Sixth and Market out to Market, Vandeventer and Southwest avenues and Watson street, and the third extending from Twelfth and Delmar boulevard out to Twelfth, Thirteenth and Mullanphy street, North Florissant avenue, Palm street and Natural Bridge avenue.

The transit company wants buses to have exclusive use of the curb lane on the side of the street carrying the heaviest volume of traffic during rush hours. It proposed also that 45 intersecting streets be closed to vehicular traffic on the flow side to make the three arteries limited-access thoroughfares during peak periods.

The chamber's committee on transit, parking and traffic considers the plan meritorious, it was announced, and the directors approved the committee's recommendation for a trial.

8 COUNTY TOWNS FAIL TO REDUCE THEIR TAX RATES

Eight municipalities in St. Louis county failed to meet today's deadline for reducing their tax rates, County Clerk Leo E. Sievers said. Their residents apparently will pay higher taxes than computations of a County Council committee indicated were justified.

The eight towns and cities are Berkeley, Cool Valley, Frontenac, Glendale, Kinloch, St. Ann, Sycamore Hills and Wilbur Park.

Sievers said two others communities, Town and Country and Crystal Lake Park, had notified him of reductions in rates. He set the deadline for rate changes so that computation of taxes to be paid by public utilities in the county could begin.

10 ST. LOUISANS IMPLICATED IN CAR THEFT RING INDICTED

Special to the Post-Dispatch. TULSA, Okla., Sept. 20—Ten St. Louis men were indicted yesterday by a federal grand jury here on charges growing out of operations of an automobile theft ring that sold more than $258,000 worth of stolen St. Louis cars in Oklahoma between Sept. 2, 1953 and March 14, 1955.

One of those named, Willie James Collins, now serving a five-year term in the Missouri Penitentiary for armed robbery, pleaded guilty to four counts shortly after the indictments were returned. He is to be sentenced later.

Another man's name was withheld pending his arrest. The others, all Negroes, are Henderson Richardson, LeAndrew Jackson, Willie Potter, Daniel B. Shelton, James Stephens, Eddie Potter, John White and Jessie Potter. In addition, O. T. Hayes and Willie W. Johnson, both St. Louis Negroes, were sentenced to terms of five years last July 19 on their pleas of guilty.

BOY LANDS 16-POUND CARP FROM POST-DISPATCH LAKE

A 16-pound carp was caught yesterday evening in Post-Dispatch lake in Forest Park by Fred H. Lowery Jr., 14 years old, 4343 Swan avenue.

His mother, Mrs. Fred H. Lowery, said the boy needed the assistance of three schoolmates to pull the fish out of the water. It was 33 inches in length, she said.

Mrs. Lowery said Fred used dough as bait and had a 9-pound line on his rod and reel. Her husband was greatly impressed by the catch, she added, because he had fished this summer in various places in Missouri, "and didn't catch a thing."

CORONER'S JURY CALLS FIREMEN'S CRASH ACCIDENT

Tractor-Trailer Driver Fails to Testify — Evidence Will Go to Grand Jurors.

A coroner's verdict of accident was returned today in the deaths of four firemen, killed early last Sunday when their pumper truck was struck by a tractor-trailer truck at Kingshighway and Manchester avenue.

Orville E. Freeze, driver of the tractor-trailer, did not testify at the inquest, on advice of counsel. He told the Post-Dispatch yesterday he did not hear the fire siren or see the flashing red light on the apparatus as he drove into the intersection with the electric traffic signal in his favor.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Joseph M. Setlich said the facts would be presented to the circuit court grand jury. Freeze, who was driving a contract mail truck to Springfield, Mo., is charged with manslaughter in four temporary warrants and with failing to yield right-of-way to an emergency vehicle. He is a liberty on $5500 bond.

Charles Gates, 1801A North Newstead avenue, who was buying gasoline at a filling station at the intersection, estimated the speed of the fire apparatus at 45 to 50 miles an hour, and that of the tractor-trailer at 30 miles an hour. After the fire truck was struck it turned over in the driveway of the filling station and one fireman was hurled over the top of his automobile, Gates said.

He lost control of the car which collided with another automobile driven by Carl Gunther Jr., 17, 4219 Jesse street, Belleville. Miss Ruth Ann Bowen, 16, a passenger in Gunther's car, of 423 Penn street, Belleville, suffered knee injuries but was released after treatment at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Hassler, 2208 West A street, Belleville, said his only public comment on the matter is that the next cat that tries a trick like that with him is going to need all nine of its lives.

MOTORIST'S BOUT WITH BLACK CAT HAS UNLUCKY END

Otto Hassler thought he was alone in his automobile driving in the 1800 block of West Main street, Belleville, yesterday when he felt a tap on his shoulder.

Badly shaken, he slowly turned his head to find himself looking a big black cat squarely in the eye. After a couple of fast puffs, the cat clambered over Hassler's back and onto his shoulder. Hassler meanwhile flailed about trying to eject the creature from the car.

WEBSTER GROVES COUNCIL POST GOES TO J. H. CARTER

Appointment of John H. Carter, a consulting engineer, to the Webster Groves City Council to succeed Herbert M. Patton, who died Sept. 10, was announced today by City Manager H. C. McClintock. Carter was named by the council to serve until the city election next April.

Carter, of 139 Reavis place, was a member of the old city council for a year before the council-manager form of government was adopted under a new city charter in May 1954.

Since June 1954 he has been vice chairman of the Webster Groves City Plan Commission.

Edward A. Rudolph, 232 Bristol road, was named to succeed Carter on the plan commission for the term expiring next June.

FINED $100, LOSES LICENSE 90 DAYS AS DRUNKEN DRIVER

Gurvis Norsworthy, 2200 block of Menard street, was fined $100 today by Police Judge Robert G. Dowd after being found guilty on a charge of driving when intoxicated.

Norsworthy, whose driver's license was suspended for 90 days, also was fined $20 on a charge of careless driving. Police testified that he was arrested Sept. 10 at Seventh and Souldard streets after his automobile collided with another car. He admitted having drunk some beer, officers said.

Police Board Assails Proposed State Inquiry Into Department

Would Be 'Highly Detrimental' to Morale, Its Says — Contends Legislative Group Lacks Authority.

The Board of Police Commissioners today assailed the proposed investigation of the Police Department by a state legislative committee, asserting it would be "highly destructive to the morale" of the entire department.

The board declared that it agreed with opinions of the Missouri Attorney General and the St. Louis city counselor that the committee, headed by Mrs. Jennie Walsh (Dem.) of St. Louis, was without legal power to make the investigation.

In a letter to Mrs. Walsh, the board said it felt that any unauthorized investigation would establish a "dangerous precedent."

The letter added that the board was anxious to co-operate with authorities and receive "constructive suggestions and comment that will enable it to improve police efficiency," remarking that its work with the circuit attorney and grand jury in the present pay-off inquiry "amply demonstrates this."

City Counselor Samuel H. Liberman informed the board that Mrs. Walsh's committee was powerless to act, on the basis of the Attorney General's ruling that it was not legally established.

I. A. Long, president of the board, said the Legislature would be asked to amend state law to permit the board to recruit policemen from anywhere in the state, and also to allow officers to live in St. Louis county.

That instrument requires that city officers and employees live in the city, except day laborers and "such cases requiring scientific, mechanical, professional, or educational qualifications."

2 MORE RANSOM BILLS ARE FOUND; TOTAL NOW IS 50

Two additional Greenlease ransom bills were found yesterday, raising the total recovered to 50, the St. Louis office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced.

The latest bills were discovered in Federal Reserve banks in Chicago and Kansas City. Of the 50 ransom notes announced as found, 35 have turned up in the Chicago bank. Two have been recovered in Kansas City.

Earlier yesterday, the FBI disclosed that another missing bill was found Friday in a New Orleans bank, which was not identified.

Other bills have been picked up at St. Louis, East St. Louis, Philadelphia, Denver, Quincy and Norris City, Ill.; Minot, N.D.; Salt Lake City, Utah, and Jacksonville, Fla.

The 50 recovered bills, all $20s, represent $1000 of the $303,720 originally reported missing from the $600,000 ransom paid Carl Austin Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady, kidnapers and killers of Baby Greenlease of Kansas City.

Less than half the ransom was found after Hall and Mrs. Heady were arrested here Oct. 6, 1953, by Police Lt. Louis Shoulters and Patrolman Elmer Dolan, both now serving prison terms for perjury in the ransom investigation.

FINED $1000 FOR PROCURING GIRL FOR DISORDERLY HOUSE

David Frederick Fangers, 21 years old, was found guilty yesterday of procuring an inmate for a house of prostitution and was fined $1000.

A jury in Circuit Judge Franklin E. Reagan's court deliberated only seven minutes before returning its verdict.

Miss Betty McKenzie, 18 years old, a friend of Fangers, pleaded guilty to the same charge before Judge Reagan today and was fined $100. The case against Fangers and Miss McKenzie was based on statements by a young woman who said she spent a month in a house of prostitution, starting last December.

GIJON, Spain, Sept. 20 (AP)—This ancient Spanish city has set up a monument to the British discoverer of Penicillin, Sir Alexander Fleming.

The monument, a bust of Fleming that cost $12,500, was paid for by popular subscription as a token of appreciation from Gijon's people. His widow, Lady Fleming, unveiled it Sunday.

FRENCH CABINET OK'S OUSTER OF MOROCCO SULTAN

Authorizes Faure, North African Minister to Name Three Men for Regency.

PARIS, Sept. 20 (AP)—France today officially resolved to remove the Sultan of Morocco and replace him with a three-man regency for an indefinite period of governmental reform.

In a stormy, three-hour meeting the French Cabinet authorized Premier Faure and his minister for Moroccan and Tunisian affairs, Pierre July, to name the three regents to replace Sultan Mohammed Ben Moulay Arafat.

This decision was taken when the French nominee, Gen. Mohammed Si Kitiati Ben Hamman, formally refused a post as regent.

Choice of Regents.

Both Faure and July told reporters that they would make their choice of regents today and include this in detailed instructions to the French resident general, Pierre Boyer de Latour.

July said: "The Government instructed the minister of Tunisian and Moroccan affairs (himself) to draft today detailed and precise instructions which will be given to the resident general in order to settle all pending issues. The Government has also approved the text of a formal statement of policy concerning Morocco. This text will be released later."

The Cabinet's decision to allow Faure and July to pick the regents ended days of debate within the French Government itself, and between French and Moroccan leaders, on the choice of the third regent.

Both sides had earlier agreed that two of them would be the former Pasha of Sefrou, Si Bekkal, a friend of exiled Sultan Sidi Mohammed Ben Youssef, and El Mokri, 108-year-old grand vizier or prime minister of Morocco.

Under Faure's plan the three regents are to install a new government of national union, including representatives of the principal nationalist movements. This is part of a program for a reconstruction of French-Moroccan relations which Faure hopes will end months of bloodshed and violence in the North African protectorate.

Time Element.

Faure seeks to have a decision on the plan in time to prevent criticism from the Arab-Asian bloc in the U.N. General Assembly which convened today in New York.

After the cabinet meeting Faure and July left to work out their own list of candidates for the third regency post. Faure explained that a list was needed because they could only appoint someone who was willing to serve. Some of the choices might follow Kitiati's example and refuse.

Under the French plan Ben Moulay Arafat will move to Tangier—willingly, the French hope—while the new Moroccan government negotiates with France to give Morocco limited self-rule within a French-Moroccan political partnership. Ben Youssef would be permitted to move to France from Madagascar where he has been exiled.

Faure conceded that the position of the present Sultan, who has repeatedly insisted that he will remain on the throne, is still a big hurdle. However, French officials are convinced that they can handle this problem.

GRANITE CITY COUNCIL UPHOLDS SALES TAX VETO

The Granite City Council last night sustained a veto by Mayor Leonard R. Davis of a bill authorizing a half-cent city sales tax. The council passed the bill earlier this month by a 10-to-4 vote.

Ten votes were needed to override the veto, but only eight were obtained by proponents of the tax. Five councilmen voted to sustain the veto. Many Illinois cities have adopted the half-cent sales tax, authorized by a new state law.

Mayor Davis announced the appointment of a committee of seven business men to seek ways of improving the city's financial position, through governmental economies or additional taxation. He said if more revenue is not obtained, or if expenses cannot be reduced, the city will have a deficit by the end of the year.

AIR FORCE, NAVY DEVELOP TWO NEW GUIDED MISSILES

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20 (UP)—The Air Force and Navy yesterday gave the public its first look at two new guided missiles used in defense against enemy aircraft. The missiles are named the Falcon and Sperry's Sparrow. They were displayed at the American Rocket Society meeting here.

The Falcon is a ground-to-air six-foot long missile developed by Hughes Aircraft Co. for the Air Force. The Sparrow is a 12-foot long air-to-air missile developed for the Navy.

The Falcon is fired from a ground mount and guided by electronic controls, while the Sparrow is fired from a plane.

PERON OUT, JUNTA NEGOTIATES WITH REBEL LEADERS

room brandishing a machine gun. Finally, after much debate, Peron's arrest was ordered, it continued. But he was warned and fled the presidential palace.

Dr. Alfred Gomez Morales, minister of economic affairs under Peron, was seized on a sand barge while trying to reach neighboring Uruguay.

Clarín's report listed the wife of the resigned foreign minister, Ildelfonso Cavagna Martini, as a refugee in Paraguay's embassy here. Jorge Antonio, a close business associate of Peron, dealing in German-made automobiles, was understood to have taken asylum in the Swedish legation.

Molina Heading Junta. The army commander-in-chief, Gen. Jose Domingo Molina, appeared to be the leader of the junta which took over the reins of government after Peron's resignation yesterday.

Molina was mentioned today as the junta president. Previous announcements had listed only three other members in the group: Gen. Emilio Forcher, commander of interior forces; Brig. Gen. Carlos Wirth, chief of staff; and Gen. Angel Juan Mendi.

In sweeping changes, the junta named leading army men to replace Peron appointees at the head of the nation's police forces.

An announcement said Gen. Felix M. Robles had resigned as director of national security and been replaced by Gen. Andres B. Bergallo, commander of the Third Army and head of the Buenos Aires garrison. "Military, police and gendarmerie forces" were put under Bergallo's over-all command.

Brig. Gen. Norberto Leoncio Mañá was named to replace Miguel Gamboa as chief of the federal police, and Brig. Gen. Benjamin Sanchez Mendoza was ordered to head the national gendarmerie.

"Both will take charge immediately," the announcement said.

Shelling Threat Denied. The communique termed without foundation an earlier report from the Government radio that the rebels had threatened again to bombard the oil refineries at Eva Peron, 35 miles southeast of Buenos Aires, because "hostilities have not ceased."

It was the rebels' threat at noon yesterday to fire on the oil installations that apparently induced Peron to quit and the army commanders previously loyal to him to propose peace talks.

Peron's resignation was accompanied by that of his cabinet, including his War Minister, Maj. Gen. Franklin Lucero, who had brought the dictator through the abortive revolt of June 16.

Lucero's last service in office was to announce an imposed farewell from his fallen chief, saying his "patriotism and love of the people led him to resign."

Junta and rebel broadcasts announced a cease-fire.

Crowds Celebrate.

In the capital a curfew last night halted jubilant celebrations by Peron's foes shouting "Liberty! Liberty!" as they paraded the streets. For the moment the ousted dictator's supporters lay low.

Demonstrators pulled down busts of Peron and his late wife from the President Peron railroad station in Buenos Aires. Tying ropes to them, they dragged the busts through the streets.

Only two disorders were reported in the capital yesterday, the first in the nation's biggest city since the revolt started. An anti-Peron crowd demonstrating in front of the Uruguayan Embassy clashed with police trying to set up barriers, and three persons were reported wounded in ensuing gunfire. Two employees of the Brazilian Embassy were injured by demonstrators at the central post office.

Cardinal Santiago Luis Copello, Roman Catholic primate of Argentina issued his first statement in many months, calling on the people to work for peace. The statement, broadcast by the state radio, said:

"In the name of Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace, who is dominate in the hearts of the Argentines, we ask that all sectors take attitudes that may be necessary to attain peace and union of brothers for the welfare of the people and the grandeur of the fatherland."

The ailing Cardinal had been a key figure in the dispute between the Peron regime and the Catholic church, the state church in Argentina. Peron touched off the controversy last November when he said in a speech that certain Catholic clergymen were trying to subvert his regime. Catholic leaders including the Cardinal denied the charge.

One big question was whether the rebel commanders scattered from the central Argentine city of Cordoba, 400 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, to Bahia Blanca, 325 miles to the southwest—could unite and exploit the advantage gained in the four-day civil war.

There also was speculation as to the future course of the junta, all of whom were close associates of Peron during his days in power.

Peron had been constitutional president of Argentina for nine years. Before that he ruled the country as a "strong man" vice president.

He offered to resign Aug. 31, but withdrew the offer after big labor rallies were held to protest.

Statement by Rebel Chief.

By the United Press. In Cordoba, Gen. Dalmiro Videla Balaguer, commander in chief of rebel forces in the province, said all rebel army chiefs had pledged not to seek personal advantages from the revolution and to decline any possible offer of nomination for the presidency.

He told United Press Correspondent Julio C. Banzas in an interview:

"We of the army want above everything else, to regain the confidence of our people." Banzas, who was assigned to report army exercises Sept. 12 and then found himself behind rebel lines, said Cordoba was calm but that the rebels were maintaining strong patrols and a state of readiness pending outcome of the negotiations.

In Buenos Aires, relative calm also reigned, enforced by rain and a curfew.

It was estimated that at least 10 persons were killed and more than 100 injured yesterday in clashes between enraged Peronists and police and soldiers or with groups celebrating Peron's downfall.

Despite a heavy downpour, celebrators paraded along Cordoba avenue, waving Argentine flags and white handkerchiefs and shouting "long live Argentina."

San Martin street at the headquarters of the Alianza Nacionalista, a right wing extremist group of Peron supporters, 100 soldiers supported by two tanks surrounded the building and forced the members out with hands up.

The Alianza was blamed for the burning of seven Buenos Aires churches last June 16 and for the destruction of Socialist headquarters and the swank Jockey Club in 1953.

On the broad Leandro Alem avenue which parallels the waterfront, Peronists stoned automobiles and smashed their windows with iron bars.

Machine guns were mounted in the Plaza San Martin and three lines of soldiers with bayonets guarded the military club there. A double line of sailors with fixed bayonets guarded the naval club and the national maritime prefecture.

A heavy police guard protected the state radio and Uruguayan Embassy building and the Government office of press and information.

Also under heavy guard were the banking district, the Peronista labor confederation headquarters, railroad stations and other Government buildings.

Washington Expects Military Rule in Argentina for Months.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (UP)—Diplomats here expect a military junta to rule Argentina for several months while ways are sought to bring back constitutional democracy to replace the Peron dictatorship.

They do not rule out entirely the possibility that Peron might still wiggle out of the situation in which he was forced to offer his resignation by a combined revolt of the navy and a large part of the army.

He has been clever at playing off different elements of his opposition and escaping from tight spots, they said. If the rebels failed to act decisively he might break their grip. Once years ago he escaped from detention on a ship in the Rio de la Plata and regained power. Diplomats, however, said that this time it looks as if his hold on power had probably run out.

If so, it came as an accumulation of disappointments among the populace over the economic situation and resentment at his treatment of the Roman Catholic church, they said.

The revolt apparently was led by conservative elements in the army and navy, which want the economy restored, civil liberties re-instated and the Catholic church left free to operate as usual.

The creation of a new government at Buenos Aires will raise the question of recognition for the United States and the other American republics.

While the State Department had no comment on this aspect of the case, officials pointed out that any new government in the Americas is traditionally recognized by the other countries if it is in effective control of its country, appears to be accepted by its people and assumes the international obligations of the state.

MOLOTOV CALLS ON U.N. TO GIVE RED CHINA SEAT

United States would make the same proposition to other nations that it makes to Russia.

Sobolev remarked that Stassen still had made no definite comment on Russian demands for reduction of armed forces and for evacuation of military bases from foreign soil. He remarked that the Soviet Union recently had reduced its military personnel by 640,000 men and had returned the Porkkala naval base it had occupied since 1947 to Finland.

To Stassen retorted that the disposition of one base by Moscow did not disclose a pattern. He requested additional details of Soviet activities in other military strongholds in the Baltic area—were they being decreased or expanded? In itself, the action in Finland was not significant, he asserted.

As to reduction of military personnel, he told the subcommittee he was authorized to submit the already published statistics on American armed forces reduced from war peak of 11,500,000 to 1,400,000 in 1950.

With the advent of the Korean police action, they were built to 3,600,000 in 1952 and in 1953 totaled 2,900,000.

Although the atoms-for-peace plan, also advanced by President Eisenhower, has been separated by consent from disarmament discussions, it is bound to be an important part of the Assembly deliberations. Actually, by exploiting peaceful uses of atomic energy through international co-operation, the venture has virtually overshadowed the disarmament debate.

By that token, American spokesmen expressing confidence that the Eisenhower plan to approach the problem of arms reduction through inspection will ultimately be accepted by Russia, pointed out that the Soviet Union first disapproved the atoms-for-peace move but reversed its stand when it received international acclaim.

Stassen and chief United States Delegate Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. both have declared that the Assembly will greet the Eisenhower inspection proposal with such enthusiasm that, as in the case of the atoms-for-peace enterprise, the Soviet Union will be compelled by world opinion to respond.

At this session, it is supposed that the nature of a proposed atomic control agency and in connection with the U.N. will be outlined.

Other issues before the Assembly include the ever-threatening Arab-Israeli conflict, colonial problems concerning particularly the French-Moroccan temper, and the vexatious British-Greek dispute about Cyprus. Admittance of new members to the U.N., with 14 blocked by Soviet veto and six through failure to gain Western approval, will also be warmly debated.

Nearly 70 disputed topics are on the Assembly agenda, not the least being the question of charter revision. Decision must be reached on the proposal for a 60-nation conference to review charter provisions with the aim of strengthening the world organization.

It is known the United States will favor conducting the review, or, at least, will not oppose it. If action is taken, the United States will propose eliminating the veto as an instrument for excluding new members if applicants receive the seven votes essential for acceptance in the 11-nation security council.

HURRICANE BLOWS TO SEA, FIVE DEAD IN NO. CAROLINA

North Carolina coastal area showed: New Bern — Four reported dead; about 40 blocks flooded to a depth of three to four feet.

Elizabethtown—One drowning reported when a dam broke after heavy rains.

Washington (N.C.)—About 38 blocks flooded two to four feet deep.

Belhaven — Extensive flooding; every house in this town of 2500 reported damaged.

Morehead City—Severe damage from both flooding and high wind.

Atlantic Beach—This oceanfront resort near Morehead City had extensive wind and wave damage.

Manteo—About three feet of water stood in homes and business buildings early today.

Gov. Luther Hodges said the damage to North Carolina coastal areas "looks worse than the last two hurricanes"—Connie and Diane.

12 Killed, 15,000 Made Homeless in Tampico in Storm Hilda. MEXICO CITY, Sept. 20 (AP)—Air communication was restored today with storm-whipped Tampico, Gulf of Mexico oil port where at least 12 persons were killed, 350 injured and some 15,000 made homeless by hurricane Hilda.

Two Mexican army transports flew from Mexico City with food, medicine, clothing and blankets. The planes will run a shuttle service to the stricken city throughout the day.

The Gulf hurricane, meanwhile, died in north central Mexico's mountains, 125 miles west of Tampico, and threats eased to north of Tampico in Mexico and Texas.

Gov. Horacio Teran reported last night that 90 per cent of Tampico's buildings, housing a population of 110,000 and thousands of refugees from an earlier storm, were damaged. He called Hilda the worst storm in the city's history.

President Adolfo Ruiz Cortines ordered unlimited aid for Tampico and other cities damaged by the hurricane.

Ciudad Madero, Altamira and other nearby towns, Teran said, suffered "considerable damage" when the storm struck.

All highways and the two railroads into Tampico were washed out by Hilda's heavy rains. They had been washed out or damaged by nearly 10 days of almost incessant rain that had accompanied the earlier tropical storm Gladys.

EAST SIDE MAYOR ASKED TO CLOSE WORTMAN CLUB

Issuance of a federal warrant charging him with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

The federal charge was based on a state warrant accusing DiMartino in the theft of a short-wave radio, taken from England's garage, 805 Exchange avenue, at the time the automobile was removed by five men, all armed with automatic pistols.

Police Visit Club Daily. Police have visited the Terrace Lounge daily since Saturday but DiMartino has been absent. Authorities said they have been informed he fled to Missouri.

His home was reported to be in St. Louis, although police here have been unable to find him.

Among the men sought for questioning in the taking of the machine is Kenneth Mueller, former doorman at the Terrace Lounge. Mueller and his friend, Birney T. (Chick) Hasey Jr., were the targets of unidentified assailants last May after they helped establish a racing news service in competition with Wortman's gambling activities.

The automobile had been towed to England's garage after it was found illegally parked in a bus zone in front of the Terrace Lounge. Its license was issued in the name of a woman, who gave a fictitious address.

The automobile, a 1955 Oldsmobile, could have been recovered lawfully by payment of a $9 fine and $5 towing charge.

New and Oldsters Convention. LONG BEACH, Calif., Sept. 20 (AP)—This ocean resort city entertained a convention of 700 war veterans today but there was little horseplay. Average age of the delegates of the United Spanish War Veterans is 79.

MARINES TO KEEP FLAG FLYING OVER OLD COURTHOUSE

The United States Marines, accustomed to raising the American flag under difficult conditions, have undertaken the job of keeping the Stars and Stripes flying from the top of the Old Courthouse at Broadway and Market street.

For more than a year the flag has not flown above the historic building, because the task of climbing 162 feet to the flagpole was too much for the elderly men employed there.

Climbing to the top of the courthouse dome will also help keep the local Marines in good physical condition. Lt. Col. John J. Jarvis, commander of the recruiting station here, said.

Yesterday, he offered the services of his men to keep the flag flying over the Old Courthouse Mondays through Fridays, observing: "It should fly over this building if over 'no other one in the city."

ASSERTS ST. LOUIS LAGS IN ITS GIVING

United Fund Drive Chairman Talks to Corporation Presidents.

The St. Louis community "has not been doing as good a job as it should" in supporting health, welfare and character-building agencies, William A. McDonnell, chairman of the 1955 United Fund campaign, said today. "It is to our best interests to correct that in the future if we are to carry out the new spirit of St. Louis," he told 200 corporation presidents at a luncheon meeting at the Hotel Jefferson.

"A start has been made in that direction in the United Fund goal," McDonnell asserted. He said corporations will be asked to give on the basis of either $8 for each employee or 11 per cent more than the combined contributions to the fund agencies in 1954, whichever is greater.

forth discussed the background and purpose of the organization, which was formed in an attempt to combine solicitations of many diverse charitable and service agencies in one big drive.

Edwin M. Clark, campaign organization chairman, told the businessmen of their responsibility for proper employee solicitation.

Eight hundred volunteer workers for the fund previewed its campaign movie last night at the Fox Theater, 527 North Grand boulevard. The movie, "The New Spirit of St. Louis," is an appeal for contributions, and will be shown generally in St. Louis area theaters beginning the week of Oct. 10.

Goal for the fund, announced Saturday, is $8,245,925. The drive, to aid 114 organizations, will open Oct. 20 and continue through Nov. 22.

New Name for Sedalia Base.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Air Force today informed Senator Symington (Dem.) of Missouri that the Sedalia (Mo.) Air Force base would be renamed Whiteman Air Force base Oct. 1. The designation will be in honor of the late Second Lt. George Allison Whiteman who was killed Dec. 7, 1941, in the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

PERMIT TO VISIT RUSSIA IS SOUGHT BY M'CARTHY FOE

SAUK CITY, Wis., Sept. 20 (AP)—Le Roy Gore, who founded the "Joe Must Go" Club that tried unsuccessfully to recall Senator McCarthy (Rep.), Wisconsin, said yesterday he had applied for a passport to visit Russia.

Gore said he wants to "study the little people, dairy farming and the newspaper industry there."

Gore said he had been told by the passport office that consideration would be given to this application if he received assurance from the Soviet Embassy in Washington that a visa to visit that country would be granted.

Gore formerly published a weekly newspaper here. His club circulated petitions last year asking a recall election for McCarthy but failed to get enough signatures.

HELD AS A LEADER OF RED UNDERGROUND

Morris Weiss Seized in
FBI.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (AP)—Morris Weiss, identified by federal authorities as an underground Communist leader, is being held on $50,000 bail on charges of violating the Smith Act.

Announcement of the arrest said Weiss disappeared from his Chicago home about four years ago and had been in the Communist underground ever since. It said he had been in Moscow for eight months of study and training in the late 1930s.

The Smith Act forbids conspiracy to teach or advocate overthrow of the Government by force. Conviction carries a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Weiss formerly was president of the Young Communist League, acting secretary of the national education commission of the Communist party, and a member of the party's national committee, the Justice Department said.

Weiss was said to have held Communist party posts in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and to have edited a Communist party publication, Political Affairs.

COUNTY ACTION ON TAX APPEAL CALLED ILLEGAL

Equalization Board's Refusal to Hear Clayton Complaint Denounced.

The St. Louis County Board of Equalization could have saved the State Tax Commission "an enormous amount of time, trouble and expense" if the board had performed its duties properly, the state commission was told today.

Arthur J. Freund, attorney for his brother, Michael W. Freund, in an appeal from an increased assessment on the latter's home at 50 Crestwood drive, Clayton, said the county board had acted illegally in that it denied a hearing in the case.

The attorney told the three-member commission, which is in session at the courthouse in Clayton, that Michael W. Freund, an insurance agent, had sought a hearing before the county board July 11. The next day, he said, he received a card saying the appeal had been denied.

In July, the county board increased the assessment on the nine-room Freund home from $13,960 to $22,340. Testimony by a real estate appraiser indicated the property, purchased in 1935 for $26,500, now had a market value of $42,000.

If the proper assessment basis is 30 per cent of market value, the appellant declared, then the increased tax valuation is obviously too high, since it assumes a true value of $74,466. An assessment of $12,600 would be proper, it was said.

Legality Questioned.
Another attorney for Freund, Sam Elson, attacked the legality of the state commission's order calling for higher assessments in 26 Missouri counties. The order did not apply equally over the state, it was charged. Elson also said it was unconstitutional to differentiate between town and rural property for tax purposes.

Beginning the second week of its hearings in the county yesterday, the State Tax Commission listened to a number of protests against 60 to 85 per cent rises in valuations placed on large houses in the suburbs. James L. Johnson, vice president of International Shoe Co., told the state agency the assessment for tax purposes of his 14-room brick house and 10 acres of land at 15 Squires Lane, Huntleigh Village, had been boosted from $37,020 to $68,490.

This was an increase of about 85 per cent and indicates the estate was treated as rural property when in fact it is a residence, Johnson's attorney, Edmonstone F. Thompson, contended. In general, increases ordered by the county in July amounted to 60 per cent for urban and 85 for rural property.

Cost $125,000 in 1932.
Johnson, who asked that his assessment be cut to a figure based on market value, said he paid $125,000 for house and land in 1932. He said he spent several thousand dollars for improvements, and three years ago had a large swimming pool built at a cost of $6000.

Testifying as an expert witness on Johnson's behalf, Whitelaw T. Terry, a real estate dealer, said the property might bring $125,000 if sold today, but reminded the commission that "you can count on half the fingers of one hand" the prospective purchasers of such a large establishment.

Terry valued Johnson's land at $5000 an acre and the house at $75,000. Chairman James M. Robertson of Kansas City, questioning Terry about the value he would place on the swimming pool, remarked jokingly: "I'm beginning to think you have a sort of Hollywood out here, finding all these pools."

Couldn't Get Lost.
"It's pretty hot in St. Louis," Terry replied. When the size of the house came up for discussion, Robertson grinned at Johnson and asked whether the owner could "get lost in there."

Johnson said no, he had been living there too long. Another home with a swimming pool was that of Percy Tucker, an automobile dealer, on Spode road in Creve Coeur. The assessment on the two-story brick house and six acres of land was increased from $18,020 to $33,340. It is a 10-room house with three baths.

The property's fair market value was estimated at $63,250 by John A. Wehmeyer, real estate officer of the St. Louis Union Trust Co. Wehmeyer said that in his opinion the $5000 swimming pool, built in 1951, "limits the sales value of the property."

Milton H. Tucker, an attorney, together with the automobile dealer, appealed for relief from an increased assessment on his 12-room, two-story brick house on Conway road, Westwood Country Club, Ladue. The valuation was hiked from $15,170 to $24,290.

Attorney Joseph W. Lewis, who represented both brothers, told the commission Milton H. Tucker built his home in 1934 at a total cost of $29,000. The present fair market value, Lewis said, was about $50,000. In each instance, an assessment under $11,000 was sought.

Most of the cases arise from the commission's July order for St. Louis county real estate assessments to be brought up to 30 per cent of actual value.

In recent days the commission has been running ahead of its time schedule because some cases do not consume all of their allotted time. Chairman Robertson today requested that appellants be present 10 or 15 minutes ahead of the appointed hour.

UNIVERSITY CITY STUDYING 5-YEAR PLAN ON TRAFFIC

Street Widening, Electric Signals and Parking Restrictions Proposed.

A five-year plan for regulation and relief of traffic in University City, involving proposed street widenings, installation of traffic signals and parking restrictions, was under study today by the City Council.

The plan was contained in a report submitted last night by the Traffic Commission of University City, a citizens' group appointed in March, 1954, by the City Council.

In a preface to the plan, the commission said it was its intention to preserve the residential character of the city and to that end "we must ignore the creed of many planners who would build expressways through our residential areas."

The commission proposed that 19 major streets be widened from their present two lanes to four lanes, and that some streets be connected to provide through traffic where it is now interrupted by dead ends. The only wholly new street in this category would be Shaftesbury avenue from North and South road to Groby road.

Electric traffic signals would be installed at 14 intersections, including seven on Olive boulevard, four on Delmar boulevard and three on other streets. Parking would be eliminated and traffic lanes established on eight streets. Of these, only Olive and Big Bend boulevards now have any such restrictions.

Through trucks would be confined to Olive boulevard and North and South road. Trustees of subdivisions within the city would be asked to remove chains and barricades across streets within those subdivisions to relieve congestion on nearby streets.

In other recommendations, the commission proposed improvements in street lighting, name changes for certain streets to provide more continuity of names, raising the speed limit on Millbrook boulevard from 30 to 35 miles an hour and installation of curbs, sidewalks and gutters adjacent to four public schools as a safety measure.

The council set Oct. 17 as the date of a meeting with the nine-member commission to discuss the report in detail.

Although the commission made no cost estimates, City Manager Elder Gunter said that if all recommendations were carried out, it would require a "substantial" bond issue in addition to the $200,000 from a 1951 bond issue that the city expects to have available at the end of this year.

The council adopted a resolution stating that while it opposed inclusion in the forthcoming county bond issue of a proposal to use the abandoned Rock Island Railroad right-of-way for a Forsyth boulevard traffic relief artery, it did not oppose use of the right-of-way for highway purposes.

It said such use would be acceptable provided the artery connected with a highway that would lead to downtown St. Louis.

ADENAUER SAYS NEW ARMY WILL BE READY BY 1959

BONN, Sept. 20 (UP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer said today West Germany's new 12-division army will be raised, equipped and fully trained by Jan. 1, 1959.

He said its tactical air force and small coastal navy will be ready for action one year later—on Jan. 1, 1960.

Adenauer said next Jan. 1 would be "A-for-Armament Day." Thus, he said, the army would be ready within three years of that date, and the air force and navy within four years.

These were the dates, Adenauer added, that the Bonn government has told the North Atlantic Treaty Organization it has set for its rearmament completion targets.

Speaking at a press conference of the agreements he concluded with Soviet leaders in Moscow last week, the West German chancellor said:

"These should not have any effect on our rearmament plans, which should go ahead smoothly as before."

REFUELING PLANE CRASHES

DOW AIR FORCE BASE, Me., Sept. 20 (UP)—A huge military refueling plane crashed in landing at this Air Force base today, killing two of the 13 men aboard.

The four-engine Air Force plane, a KC-97 similar to a Boeing Stratocruiser commercial airliner, ran off the runway and exploded. The plane was attached to the 241st Refueling Squadron.

COURT CONFIRMS MO. PAC. 'AGREED SYSTEM PLAN'

One of Final Steps in Ending 22 Years of Bankruptcy — Appeals Possible.

One of the final steps in removing the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. from bankruptcy was taken yesterday when United States District Judge George H. Moore issued an order confirming the "Agreed System Plan" of reorganization.

However, objectors to the plan have 90 days in which to seek a writ of certiorari from the United States Supreme Court for a review of the order. There may also be appeals to the highest court from the decision of the United States Court of Appeals this month upholding Judge Moore's original approval of the plan.

While appeals from yesterday's order may be taken, the actual work of preparing the road for private ownership is going forward. Missouri Pacific has been in bankruptcy for more than 22 years.

The reorganization board of managers is at work drafting the necessary documents, securities and plans for merging the 25 rail lines that make up the Missouri Pacific System. When its work is concluded, application for an order of consummation will be made to Judge Moore and, barring an unfavorable decision on any appeals, it would be issued shortly next year.

In his opinion confirming the plan, Judge Moore noted that all but two of the objections to that order had been raised and disposed of in his order approving the plan last Feb. 25.

One of the newly raised objections is that the court in its discretion should withhold confirmation until all appeals, if any, from the decision of the Court of Appeals, have been disposed of. Conceding that such discretion exists, Judge Moore nevertheless ruled that such delay would serve no legitimate interest of any party and, if the order of approval should ultimately be upheld, would unduly postpone reorganization of the railroad.

The second objection was that two of the 18 classes of creditors and security holders to whom the plan was submitted approved it by majorities of less than two-thirds. Judge Moore pointed out that notwithstanding failure of any class to give the plan such a majority, the court still has the right to confirm the plan if it makes adequate provision for fair and equitable treatment of the interests or claims of those rejecting it. Moore said he was convinced the interests of the classes were given treatment that is "entirely fair and equitable."

The New York Herald Tribune—Post-Dispatch
Special Dispatch

Hoxie, Ark., Sept. 20—Mysterious knocks at the door, threatening telephone calls through the night, curses screamed from passing automobiles—these are weapons used by white supremacists in an attempt to force the board of education of this small town to revert to the old ways of the deep South and keep Negro children out of white schools.

So far, the five-man board and the school superintendent, K. E. Vance, have stood firm in their decision to place 20 Negro children among white pupils. They have resisted the war of nerves, and so have their families. It has not been easy. There has been no violence, but malicious tongues have inflicted wounds that may never heal.

Town Confused, Frightened.

Hoxie, a town of 1855 on the edge of the Mississippi delta, is confused and frightened. Hoxie's turmoil began when school opened July 11 and 12 Negro children took seats in the previously all-white elementary school. Eight Negroes enrolled in the previously all-white high school.

Like most towns in the East Arkansas Delta region, Hoxie starts its fall term in July in order to permit a long recess in late September and October so the children can pick cotton. Under this schedule, schools were to let out Sept. 2 and reopen Oct. 31, but the uproar forced Superintendent Vance to shut the schools two weeks ahead of schedule.

The decision to integrate had been taken unanimously by the school board, based on these factors: (1) Desire to comply with the Supreme Court ruling against segregation, (2) economy, and (3) "It was right in the sight of God."

Opened Quietly.

The schools had opened almost without incident. Half a dozen parents formed a grumbling group in front of the main school. One man was heard to say: "I'd give $100 to the fellow who'd whip Vance." There were no takers. A teenager taunted: "Why don't you save the $100 and whip him yourself?" (Mr. Vance is six foot three, weighs 245 pounds and is a former tackle at Arkansas State. Now 42 years old, he has put on some weight but still looks pretty rugged.) After an hour the crowd dispersed.

For 18 days the desegregated schools ran without disturbance. The few Negro pupils were allowed to use all the facilities—restrooms, cafeterias, drinking fountains—without a murmur from the white children.

This lowering of the color bar seemed to have won community acceptance. But Hoxie was the first Delta town to end segregation, and the national publicity aroused white supremacists throughout the South.

Flood of Abusive Letters.

Quick to take note of Hoxie's defiance were the citizens' councils of Mississippi, composed of "white males dedicated to the preservation of segregation." Abusive letters from Mississippi poured into Hoxie. Seven men from Hoxie were invited to attend a citizens' council rally at Senatobia, Miss. There were a number of speakers, including Senator James O. Eastland (Dem.), Mississippi, urged the crowd to "repudiate" the Supreme Court and "fight and pray" against desegregation.

Back in Hoxie the seven organized a committee and launched a campaign against the school board. Heading the group was Herbert Brewer, a soybean farmer and auctioneer, who removed his son from school and urged other parents to join the boycott.

The committee first demanded that the board rescind its integration order. This was ignored. Then the group circulated a petition calling for the board to resign. They claimed 1063 signatures. The board received the petition and said "no comment."

Hired Attorney.

The committee hired a lawyer Amis Guthridge, Little Rock Dixiecrat and attorney for "White America, Inc." "White America" is the Arkansas counterpart of the Mississippi Citizens Councils. Membership is $5 a year. Mr. Guthridge told me that any white man could belong and that "we don't care if he's Catholic or Jew." Yet "White America's" literature would appear to limit white membership. Under the heading: "Will our descendants be Anglo-Saxon or mulatto?" The following appears:

"The future American must be Anglo-Saxon or mulatto. You can never have social or political equality with the Negro without asking him to your home sooner or later. If you ask him to your home, he will break bread with you at last. And if you seat him at your table, he takes the right to ask your daughter's hand in marriage."

Years of Inter-Marriage.
This "do-you-want-your-daughter-to-marry-a-Negro" line has been most effective in frightening and inflaming the people of Hoxie. Fear of inter-marriages resulting from the mixing of whites and Negroes in classrooms is prevalent throughout the south. Hoxie's Mayor Mitchell Davis commented: "There's been quite a lot of inter-marriage in the north, if you can believe the newspapers." Told that racial inter-marriages made the headlines precisely because they were uncommon, the mayor snorted: "Even once is enough."

Several children had been withdrawn from classrooms by their parents by the time Superintendent Vance decided to close the schools. Vance conceded that "kids and teachers were under tension and strain."

Terrorist Tactics.

Superintendent Vance lives in a frame house at the edge of town. It is a dark, unpaved street and during the first nights of the Hoxie crisis an automobile filled with men cruised slowly by, snarling obscenities and calling Mrs. Vance "nigger woman."

The Vance children were looking at television in the living room so we talked in the kitchen while Mrs. Vance made coffee.

"The pressure on the school board has been terrific," Vance said. "Telephones ringing all night. Calls at 1 and 2 o'clock in the morning. Usually dead silence at the other end. Sometimes anonymous threats."

The mail brought more threats—always anonymous—and there was the familiar business of loud raps on the door in the dead of night and nobody there when the door was opened.

As yet the Negroes have suffered no reprisals. Vance said that on moral and economic grounds the integration step "should have been taken long ago." The board figured to save $4000 to $5000 by closing the Negro elementary school and ending the expensive haul of eight Negro high school students to Jonesboro, where they were charged tuition.

"We made a silent check of opinion," said Vance. "Only half a dozen parents voiced objection. Then the citizens councils just rained literature on us and a lot of people were stampeded."

Regardless of the outcome, it is generally conceded that the white supremacy groups have halted temporarily the drive toward integration in Arkansas. Other communities moving quietly to end segregation this year have become paralyzed by fear of publicity.

SERGE RUBINSTEIN MURDER REWARD OF $25,000 POSTED

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (AP)—Executors of the estate of Serge Rubinstein have offered a $25,000 reward for evidence leading to conviction of his killer or killers. Rubinstein, colorful financial figure and international man of mystery, was found strangled in his luxurious Fifth avenue mansion last Jan. 27. Announcement of the award was made yesterday by William A. Hyman and Stanley N. Zwalk, estate attorneys. The award was posted, they said, "to induce anyone with undisclosed information to help solve this brutal killing."

Edward J. Ennis, co-executor of the estate with the murdered man's mother, Mrs. Stella Rubinstein, said the family nevertheless felt the police investigation had been "very thorough and vigorous."

HENNINGS GROUP SOLICITS VIEWS ON CIVIL RIGHTS

Questionnaire Designed to Aid Inquiry and Provoke Discussion of Controversies.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem.), Missouri, announced today the Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights is soliciting opinion on whether free speech and press rights are being abridged.

Hennings said he believed the questionnaire his group is distributing would help the subcommittee in its current study of civil rights questions. But he said he also hoped it would provoke public discussion of "the most controversial issues" growing out of the rights guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution. Chief among these are freedom of speech and of the press.

The Senator explained the questionnaire relates principally to the extent of an individual's right to hold and express disputed ideas on political subjects.

Copies will be sent to any interested individual who writes the subcommittee here. However, subcommittee staff members said the questionnaire also will be distributed to organizations and persons concerned with these particular problems.

The subcommittee tentatively has set the week of Oct. 17 for public hearings on free speech and press problems.

One of the principal questions asked by the subcommittee lists four different possible points of view on the extent to which these freedoms might be abridged.

The person answering the questionnaire is asked to say whether he thinks they should be abridged (1) never; (2) where a "clear and present danger" exists; (3) by Congress in times of war or public danger; or (4) as applied to Communists and fellow travelers who do not believe in such freedoms.

The questionnaire lists a dozen types of governmental action which "have been questioned under the free speech and press clause." It asks whether the respondent regards these actions as abridgements and, if so, whether they are justified by the present international situation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (UP)—The Army said today Warrant Officer Robert E. Northcutt, Kankakee, Ill., and Pfc. Julius A. Boer, Grand Rapids, Mich., were killed in a helicopter accident at the Thule Air Base, Greenland, Sunday.

Northcutt was piloting the helicopter which crashed at the base. Boer was the crew chief. The Army said it had no further details on the crash.

Realistic.
DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Holy Trinity Catholic school held a fire drill, showing off for three city fire inspectors. The students left the building and assembled outside. A kitchen helper ran out and whispered, "fire," to the principal, Sister Verena. The inspectors rushed inside and put out a fire back of the automatic dish washer.

"First time I ever had a formal appointment with a fire," said Inspector F. F. Dunaway.

He Was So Right.
CINCINNATI (AP)—George Kersting thought his six children were strictly up to monkey business when one of them yelled "There's a monkey in the back yard."

Sure enough, there was a monkey rapidly making friends with the youngsters. They fed him some bread and a banana. Later the visitor took to the trees and disappeared in a wooded area in the neighborhood.

WHO'S WHO in the NEWS

Peron Picked Up Many Ideas
From Mussolini, Liked to Talk
To Crowds From a Balcony

Was Skillful at Playing Off Opposing Elements Against Each Other, Then Destroying Both — Wrecked Argentina's Economy.

The writer, formerly United Press general manager for South America, lived in Buenos Aires for 12 years and knew Peron well. He is now vice president and assistant general manager of United Press.

By THOMAS R. CURRAN

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (UP).

JUAN D. PERON picked up many of his political ideas from Benito Mussolini. He liked to make speeches from a balcony to his followers massed in the streets below. Peron watched Mussolini in action when he was Argentine military attaché in Rome. He listened and learned. He became a politician in uniform.

Like Mussolini, Peron is a great talker, and he had a knack of telling his listeners exactly what he thought they wanted to hear.

Once when Guy Ray, United States counselor to Argentina, reproached him for an anti-American speech Peron said: "You must always keep in mind the people I'm talking to." Peron is handsome in a florid way. In recent years he kept his hair jet-black by the use of dye. He is husky in build, tending to pudginess.

He is a sports enthusiast. During his student days he had been an outstanding boxer and swordsman and when he took over Argentina he sponsored everything that favored the development of sports in the schools.

Whenever visiting American business men called on Peron he had a set speech for them. First he thanked them for giving him some of their valuable time. Then he said he didn't want to meddle in the internal affairs of other countries, but he would like to suggest that the United States quit making overly generous loans to Latin American countries.

If the United States lends them millions of dollars, Peron would say, "these South American countries lose incentive to produce wealth for themselves. Quit lending them money! Make them go to work themselves!"

The average business man from the United States thought that was very sound, indeed, and was inclined to consider Peron a misunderstood or misrepresented figure. What was overlooked was that Peron himself got a $125,000,000 loan from Uncle Sam in 1951 although he insisted it was not a loan but a "credit."

Controlled Press.

Peron had absolutely no conception of a free press. He knew that after he had confiscated the great independent newspaper La Prensa nothing was printed in Argentina that was contrary to his wishes. He couldn't understand why the same thing wasn't true elsewhere.

One United States Ambassador after another would be met with Peron's request to "do something" about the unfriendly attitude of the American newspapers toward his regime. He couldn't believe that Washington couldn't control the editorial policy of the leading United States newspapers if it really wanted to.

Peron was very skillful at playing off opposing elements against each other and eventually liquidating both.

His entrance on the political scene was due to the revolution of the Argentine Army in 1943. But despite that he set out to do everything he could to cut down the power of the army. The big Campo de Mayo just outside Buenos Aires was reduced sharply in number of detachments and armament. The naval air base at Punta Del Inval rarely had enough gasoline to mount a full scale attack against the capital city. He limited the number of cannon, machine guns, trucks and tanks assigned to the various regiments. Also he screened carefully the officers and set up an elaborate spy system to watch over them.

Helped Communists.

I had a dozen or so talks with Peron during the time I was assigned to Buenos Aires. On most of the visits I found him smiling and amiable and trying to convince me that he was a great lover of the United States. He also insisted he was strongly anti-Communist. He would make references to the strength of the Communists in Brazil and Chile and then point out that in Argentina he had cut down their force to almost nothing. Actually, the Communists gained in strength under Peron because his campaigns of promoting class hatred fitted perfectly into their strategy. He told me last year that he had weakened the Communist party "not with my speeches but by giving them something." By that he referred to the wave of pay increases he put through by Government decree which had won the votes of the workers.

Peron had several hobbies. One was riding fast motorcycles. He built a special concrete track at the presidential country residence for motorcycles and enjoyed spending weekends with 17- and 18-year-old girl students from a student federation of secondary schools which he created. Another hobby was the special showings of movies. Often he would run the projector himself.

He also had a flair for practical jokes. The governor of the province of Buenos Aires, Carlos Aloe, got too close to swimming pool. Peron shoved Aloe in, clothes and all, and howled with laughter. Before his first election when he had some time to kill he picked up telephone directories and started calling names at random, urging them to vote for Tamborini, the candidate running against him. He was delighted with the reaction of many Argentines who resented being polled politically over the phone.

Role of Evita.

Many people in the United States had the idea that Evita, Peron's vigorous wife who died three years ago, was the more dominant personality of the two. I do not agree. I think that Peron had great influence over Evita, but I also think that he used her for his own purposes—often to do dirty work he didn't want to take the responsibility for himself.

Peron prided himself on being "the first worker of Argentina." All the official newspapers printed daily a schedule of his work day, invariably starting off with the fact that he arrived at his office at 6:20 a.m. Once when a delegation of American labor leaders were in Buenos Aires Peron invited them to a meeting at 8 a.m. and was asked when they replied that that was too early.

Part of the secret of his early show-up, however, was that he went to his office with his clothes put on over his pajamas. At the office he would bathe, he shaved, read the morning papers and have breakfast before his first appointment.

Peron's regime wrecked the economy of the country, spending all that had been accumulated before he took over and all the income during his administration. If rumors are correct, much of the deposits placed in the pension fund for the future also were spent. First through his brother-in-law and later through his brother-in-law's associate, Jorge Antonio, Peron was supposed to be in on the pay-offs of almost all the important business done by the Argentine state.

Diesel locomotives could not be bought for the railroads which Peron nationalized. Frozen meat could not be sold to Peru or carpet wool to the United States without Peron getting some share of the take. He is supposed to have a large fortune staked away in Switzerland.

KNOWLAND WARNS RUSSIANS ARE LOSING 'GENEVA SMILE'

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20 (AP)—Senator Knowland (Rep.), California, warned yesterday that the "Geneva smile" of Russian leaders is wearing off.

He quoted remarks of the Soviet party leader, Nikita Khrushchev, that "anybody who takes our smile for withdrawal from the teachings of Karl Marx or Lenin is making a mistake."

"This nation and the free world will ignore this reaffirmation of Soviet faith at its peril," Knowland told a World Affairs Council luncheon meeting. "The present rulers of the Soviet Union are never going to depart from the Marx-Lenin-Stalin line and there will be no relief of tension until the Russian people are able to select a government of their own choice."

"Whatever we do to ease the economic situation of the Kremlin masters tends to prolong the time when the Russian people may be free."

KIMBALL SAYS U.S. COULD
AVOID BIG WAR 200 YEARS

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20 (AP)—The United States can avoid a major war for 200 years if it keeps its hands off, says Representative Dan Kimball.

Kaiser Wilhelm, Hitler, Tojo and the Chinese Communists were tempted to attack the United States because of our lack of military forces, Kimball told a meeting of the American Pocket Society yesterday.

Kimball said the United States has assumed the world role asserted by England of keeping small wars from spreading.

"We won't have two years to get ready for the next one," Kimball warned. "We'll be lucky if we have two weeks."

Master Politician Peron Rode Roughshod on Civil Liberties

Open Fight Against Catholic Church in November 1954 Called Beginning of the End.

By the Associated Press.

FOR 10 YEARS Juan Domingo Peron ruled Argentina as a virtually unchallenged dictator. A master politician, he pocketed his enemies one by one. He rode roughshod, throttling the press and civil liberties—even defying the leadership of the Roman Catholic church.

Yesterday the machinery he built up with the blood and tears of the Argentine people shattered in his face.

Peron's destiny began to take shape in 1943. As a young army colonel he joined a military junta that seized the Argentine government amid unsettled political conditions.

He agreed to take on the lowly job of secretary of labor. He believed he could win Argentina's laboring men to his support by the power of decree—higher wages and better working conditions.

By October 1945 he was vice president and an undisputed strong man. But his career almost came to an end then.

Aroused by the suppression of civil liberties under a state of siege and the arrest of about 1000 of Argentina's most prominent lawyers, judges, newspaper men, politicians and diplomats, thousands of students went on a nation-wide strike. They demonstrated in the streets for "constitution and Workers' Strength.

That was made to order for Peron. The workers quickly showed their strength. With a general strike they shut down the nation. The army leaders, after a week, gave up.

Peron, freed from prison, strode triumphantly to the balcony of Government House to address thousands of enthusiastic followers in the plaza before it. He was in power again and forced the formation of a new cabinet.

A week later he married actress Eva Duarte, and together they formed an unbeatable combination.

He won the Feb. 24, 1946, presidential election with ease.

A United States State Department blue book, issued 12 days before the election, backfired. The United States, irked by Peron speeches declaring it would make no difference whether the Axis or the Allies won the war, charged him with protecting Nazi agents and refugees in Argentina. Peron charged the blue book was an effort by foreigners to dictate in an Argentine election.

Peron launched government monopolies which bought up Argentina's chief export products, meat, wheat and edible oils, at fixed prices and sold them at a huge profit in a post-war world hungry for commodities.

With the profits he carried out a vast $1,700,000,000 five-year plan of nationalizing railroads, airlines, buses, shipping and utilities and building new industries. He bought the British-owned railway system and the American-owned telephone system.

He proclaimed a "decadence" for workers, including higher wages, shorter hours, retirement funds, paid vacations, maternity aid, Christmas bonuses and dismissal indemnities. He gave women the vote.

Eva, the blonde actress and radio star, plunged into politics in a big way. She rallied the workers to Peron's colors with her glowing speeches, her beauty and her scorn of aristocrats who had snubbed her. She presided at an office in the Labor Ministry where she kept a finger on all that was going on and distributed largess to the needy—which paid off when

Freedom Goal
Of Revolt, Says
Dr. Gainza Paz

Ousted Publisher Rejoices in Overthrow of Argentine Dictator.

Dr. Alberto Gainza Paz's newspaper, La Prensa of Buenos Aires, was confiscated by the Peron government in 1951 and he fled to Uruguay, narrowly escaping arrest by Peron's police. He has since lived in the United States, acting as spokesman against the Peron government.

By DR. ALBERTO GAINZA PAZ

Written for the United Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.

THE widespread rebellion which forced Peron to resign voiced the true sentiment of the Argentine people. Up to 1943, they had lived under a democracy for 80 years. They did not willingly accept life under Peron's unconstitutional regime, copied from the totalitarian states. They hated the rule of a man who was, as Churchill said of Hitler, "a monstrous product of wrong and shame."

A provisional government is in the offing for Argentina. Whether it will be of the armed forces alone, or composed of military and civilian elements, it is too early to know.

Freedom for All.

The revolutionary movement was inspired by a desire to regain freedom for all the Argentines. And if, as every Argentine expects, any provisional government will pursue that aim, I am convinced that it will get the full cooperation of every Argentine citizen—and of every party except the Communists. Everybody who knows Argentine politics knows that the Communists have always supported Peron. Every other political party which has opposed the Peron dictatorship wants to see our country restored to the honored position it had among the American democracies.

I know that the American people rejoice at these events, as do my fellow countrymen, because they know that there cannot be peace and progress and happiness without freedom.

It was exactly 10 years ago that the first great anti-Peron demonstration took place in Buenos Aires—for a return to the constitution and liberty.

That was before Peron became President, but he was already in control of the government. World War II was just over; the Peron group had expected the totalitarian pow-

Anti-Communist, Fired by Bonn,
Makes Fast Switch to Pro-Reds

Col. Bogislav von Bonin, Who Opposed NATO, Is Becoming Darling of Most Sinister Forces in West Germany.

By GASTON COBLENTZ

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

BONN, Sept. 20.

COL. BOGISLAV VON BONIN, who was dismissed from a high post in the Bonn defense office earlier this year, is becoming the darling of some of the most sinister forces at work in West Germany.

The 47-year-old Prussian-born officer held important jobs both in wartime and in postwar Germany. He became chief of operations of the German army in 1944 at the remarkable age of 38. After the war, he became chief of the Bonn defense office's military planning section.

He was fired because he tried to rally his friends among high-ranking German military men against the plans to tie the projected West German army as closely as possible into the Western military alliance. He charged this would prevent the reunification of Germany.

A Rapid Switch.

The colonel's case derives added interest from the rapidity with which a man widely known as a strong anti-Bolshevik switched to association with pro-Communist elements in a matter of a few months. It is ironic that Col. von Bonin was one of the men in the Bonn defense setup for whom a number of American military men tended to have special regard.

He appeared to them in recent years as the paragon of rigorous Prussian virtues and integrity and seemed the incorporation of the type of upright German officer one could work with in the common defense against Bolshevism.

One of the first things the colonel did after he was fired was to tie up with the Rhine-Westphalian News of Dusseldorf, which is accused of having Communist connections in East Germany.

The paper has been campaigning for the withdrawal of West Germany from NATO. It is closely linked with another Dusseldorf group called the Hans von Seeckt Society, named after the German general of the Weimar period who favored close co-operation with Russia.

Former Nazi S.A. Chief. One of the heads of the Hans von Seeckt Society is Gen. Otto von Wagnier, former chief of staff of the Nazi S.A. (Storm Abteilung) in 1929-30. He is also one of the publishers of the Rhine-Westphalian News. Gen. Wagnier is reported to have been in contact with Marshal Friedrich Paulus in East Germany. Marshal Paulus, the loser at Stalingrad, has long been a spokesman for Communist propaganda. He is appealing from East Germany to the officers' corps in West Germany to rebel against Bonn's alliance with the West.

Col. von Bonin has told journalists that he also wants to make contact with Marshal Paulus and may visit East Germany for this purpose.

The Rhine-Westphalian News and the Hans von Seeckt Society are connected with Nazi elements in West Germany in addition to their Eastern ties.

They constitute part of a network of connections between the Soviet-directed East German Communists and a segment of the extreme right wing in West Germany.

Addressed Pro-Red Group. Last week, Col. von Bonin addressed a group of about 100 officers in Frankfurt. They were assembled by Col. Adolf Dickfeld. Col. Dickfeld, who shot down 164 enemy planes as a Luftwaffe ace in World War II, is head of a body called the "Working Group for All-German Soldiers' Meetings."

This organization is also friendly to the Soviets. At the same time it has ties with former Hitler youth and S.A. figures in West Germany.

Among the men who attended the Frankfurt session were some reported to be friends of Otto Strasser, a prominent leader of the Nazi movement in the mid-1920s. Strasser returned to Germany from Canada this year, and has been trying to organize a new radical movement.

Col. von Bonin is also reported to have entered into contact with some notorious "national Bolshevik" elements in North Germany—that is, former Nazis who are working with the Communists.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight for the public welfare; never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or profligate government.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

As to the Plaza

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In a few short weeks, the Land Clearance Commission will select a corporation to redevelop the newly cleared Plaza area. This will probably be one of the great decisions for the future of the City of St. Louis, and therefore, it is hoped that extreme caution will be used in making such selection.

Since certain interests of our city, including the press, have constantly urged the erection of 1300 apartment dwellings on this site, this writer feels compelled to state his reasons why such a decision would be cheerfully and result in a fiasco. They are:

1. An apartment shortage does not exist in St. Louis now, nor will one in the foreseeable future.

2. Apartments will not bring in more money to the city. At most, it would merely effect transfer of residence from north, south and west St. Louis to the downtown area.

3. The rentals because of construction cost will exceed the ability of the middle-income individual to pay $110 to $150 per month.

4. The buildings will exclude children because of limited size, excessive rental and lack of schools.

5. The housing project cannot possibly ever hope for more than 50 to 60 per cent occupancy, and such occupancy cannot begin to pay mortgage notes. In the event of failure, and fail it must, the city will be saddled with a second-class slum.

6. In comparable size cities where apartment dwellings were erected in the downtown areas, the result has been poor.

The Plaza area is the most valuable piece of property in downtown St. Louis. It offers the only direct expansion area for the natural growth of the heart of our city. Therefore, it must be put to its best use, and its best use certainly is not housing.

This area needs something that will draw people and money to St. Louis. This city needs a mart building to attract buyers. It needs more federal buildings and office buildings for national concerns. And so on. Therefore, with this great opportunity at hand, let us hope that the foresight and the judgment of the Land Clearance Commission will be such that the community as a whole will benefit immeasurably from their selection of a plan and a sponsor for the Plaza area. B. H. TUREN.

Speed in a Safety Belt

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I am wondering whether safety belts, about which we are reading more and more lately, will fall into the same paradoxical category of seeming to be a step toward safety, yet actually increasing the number of accidents by cultivating improper driver psychology.

I'm afraid most of us will not be able to resist the temptation to increase our cruising speed by 10 or 15 miles per hour when we feel the solid security of that belt strapped across our laps.

WALTER W. PARKER JR.
Ferguson.

Where the Fault Lies

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Indeed it was a sad incident of the abandonment of the little child from Herculaneum. The people and law makers of this state ought to wake up to the seriousness of the problems concerning parents of the retarded. It is a pitiful situation when a parent as a last resort to solve the problem must turn to abandonment.

Thousands of dollars are spent every day uselessly. They are needed so desperately for schools, training programs, institutions, etc., for the retarded.

Of course we don't think of the father as doing the right thing when he puts his child on the street. But who are we to pass judgment when his state of mind was to the point of despair?

The State of Missouri is at fault and is lagging far behind in aid for the retarded. Jefferson county received too much bad publicity and criticism. But tell me what kind of help can a welfare office offer if not backed up by the state?

I do hope the courts will be lenient with this father.

MRS. MYRON SMITH.
Secretary, Jefferson County Association for Retarded Children.
Festus.

Breaking in a Law

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I see where the Governor of Oklahoma wants the lawmakers to permit the whipping post. If such a bill is passed, let us use it on the Governor and the lawmakers first. If they can take it, OK. DOLLY NEFF.
Kansas City, Mo.

At the State Level

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

It is about three weeks since my letter, concerning the sweat shop wages paid workers not protected by federal law appeared in the Post-Dispatch. I am grateful for your publishing it, but am saddened to see that no one—no worker, no employer, no clergyman, no labor leader, not one citizen was sufficiently interested in the maltreated worker to make comment.

It seems to me such workers could use a fair shake. The ideal situation would probably be union representation for all workers. Since this might never come to be, the best solution appears to be a minimum legal wage law established at state level. Now! GARRY P. GAGNON.

Peron Walks the Plank

Argentina's future now appears to depend on the kind of deal which can be worked out among rival militarists.

With the army divided and naval guns arrayed to bombard Buenos Aires, Juan Peron has been overthrown.

Obviously this revolt is no broadly-based popular uprising. The people of Argentina have little taste for the shooting. They are sitting this one out.

The people saw the ineptness of the June revolt against Peron, and the insincerity of Peron's offer of civil peace which followed. But long before that, many Argentinians must have lost whatever faith they had in Peron, without gaining much new faith in his opposition.

Public apathy in the political situation was most apparent three weeks ago. Both Peronist and anti-Peron factions staged street demonstrations in Buenos Aires, but the street mob was small compared to the 100,000 spectators who turned out at the same time for a soccer game. Restaurants and theaters were more crowded than political arenas.

A decade and a half of political history explains the mood of disillusionment. The two governments which preceded Peron were weak amalgamations of the nation's most conservative elements, which even flirted with the Axis powers. The political reins traditionally were held between the admirals and generals and the landed aristocracy.

Peron then came to power as the champion of the descamisados, the shirtless ones. Handsome and spirited, he was elected with a strong majority. He promised to raise workers' standards, and he began an overly ambitious industrialization campaign. But as time went on his Government became more and more solely devoted to its own survival, and a police state emerged. The friend of the poor became the poor man's Mussolini.

Argentina has rid itself of a skillful and brutal demagogue. But what then? Peronism has corrupted much of public life. There is no strong, independent political opposition. Peron allowed none. A military junta rules and Argentinians who respect the older democratic traditions of their country can take no satisfaction in that.

Argentina is a vigorous nation. Once free of the stifling effects of Peronism, the country undoubtedly will regain its old position of influence in the New World. But a great deal of political reconstruction must occur between the day of Peron's downfall and the day of real liberation.

The Medical School's Task

Dr. Frank R. Bradley of Barnes Hospital undoubtedly was right when he told the American Hospital Association that it may be 10 years before the public generally will get professional care as good as that afforded by the more recent graduates of the country's medical schools. Older practitioners, he said, are not as well trained.

As long as there are advances in medical knowledge, this will be more or less true. Always the latest group of students will get the latest information. Earlier graduates will have to do their best to keep up by reading professional journals, taking refresher courses and otherwise learning what was not in the textbooks of their day.

An even greater cause for concern, however, is the fact that so many Americans still cannot count on care by doctors, young or old, especially away from the big cities. So while medical educators may worry about ways of bringing former students up to date, they also should be concerned about how to make training facilities available to an ever larger number of students. This is their share of the responsibility that goes with the growth of a nation.

It's Only the World Series

Some unsung hero of the White House staff, presumably not a baseball fan, is blamed for scheduling the President's conference on physical fitness for the week of the World Series. Hence many leaders in the world of sport cannot go to Denver. This strikes us as an understandable mistake, for there is a difference between keeping fit and keeping up with sports events. And the White House staff may even have its attention fixed on Moscow or Geneva, rather than New York or Cleveland. These mistakes happen. Now, if the President's conference had been scheduled for the week of the Army-Navy football game, or the National Open Golf tournament, that would be different. That would be inexplicable, incomprehensible and altogether unlikely.

'Upheaval of Deprived Peoples'

The present state of the mind of Asia and Africa has been eloquently described in the pastoral letter of the Episcopal bishops, sent out from the convention of their church in Honolulu. Said the bishops:

In all these lands there is a tidal upheaval of deprived, hungry peoples struggling for food and nationhood and a full, human status and acceptance, and resentful towards the West and the white man in his pride and power.

It is a fact which has not escaped the attention of statesmen that these non-white peoples are in "full revolt against foreign political and economic control, against colonialism and imperialism." Nor can many be unaware that this is a "revolt against the Western white man's assumption of his permanent superiority, or that 'all of these peoples have experienced in some form the sting of contempt.'"

The United States displayed admirable foresight when confronted by this problem. Having driven Spain out of the Philippines, Washington adopted a policy of self-government for the islands. Much later, Great Britain faced the facts and arranged a withdrawal from India which won a new respect for London and kept a great nation in the Commonwealth. But the Dutch left Indonesia only under pressure of native armies. Even after the lessons of Syria and Lebanon, the French governments clung to Indochina until the hour of disaster. Even now Paris is following a reluctant and hesitant policy in North Africa. This despite the wise counsel of a Mendes-France and a Grandval, and despite the more liberal views of a substantial body of French public opinion.

The same arguments are always advanced by those who want to hang on: The economy of the "mother country" depends in large measure on the resources of colonies or protectorates, and the latter have benefited by the introduction of sanitation, medicine, education and the methods of modern commerce. These arguments are true as far as they go. But the advantage of the governor looks to the native like unmitigated exploitation, hardly paid for by medicine and school-books.

The way out is the way of willing co-operation. Nobody doubts the benefits to be derived by the French and the North Africans from free economie association. But this calls for a renunciation of "the Western white man's assumption of his permanent superiority." It calls for a new regard for native rights. But if these rights can be asserted only by force, the West can expect only tragedy.

Danger to Defense?

A most disturbing piece of national defense news was reported in yesterday's Post-Dispatch by Joseph Alsop. This was the news that "the Soviet Union is now overtaking the United States in the air-atomic weapons race."

As reported by Mr. Alsop, a committee of distinguished scientific leaders has made a study of defense production in the United States and in Russia and has advised the National Security Council that in the period 1960-65, the lead which this country now enjoys can be expected to pass over to the Communists.

Mr. Alsop lists three factors which he says "are known to have led" the committee of scientists to their conclusion. These are:

1. Continuous buildup of the Soviet atomic and hydrogen bomb stockpile.
2. Massive Soviet production of long-range and medium range jet bombers and day and night jet fighters.
3. Presumed Soviet progress in the development of guided missiles.

This is not the imagination of a group of alarmists. Quite the contrary. It is the thoughtful, considered judgment of serious men of science—such men as the committee's chairman, Dr. James R. Killian Jr., president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It represents the scientific thinking of Dr. Lee A. DuBridge, president of the California Institute of Technology; Dr. I. I. Rabl, Columbia University atomic physicist; Dr. Charles A. Thomas, president of Monsanto Chemical Co., and Dr. Norris E. Bradbury, director of the Los Alamos scientific laboratory, any many others.

There is nothing hasty or slipshod about this committee and its work. It deliberated for many months and twice it obtained extensions in time so that it might be even more thorough in preparing its findings for our civilian and military defense leaders.

If Mr. Alsop's account is supported in full, then the scientists not only call attention to this unfavorable situation, but strongly urge the Eisenhower Administration to reverse the trend.

Here is a matter of the most urgent importance. It concerns every last American in the total of 165,000,000. Surely President Eisenhower or Secretary of Defense Wilson will be quick to answer the questions that are now in countless worried minds.

So far there has been only a comment by Murray Snyder, Assistant Press Secretary for the White House, that Correspondent Alsop's report is "inaccurate." Mr. Snyder says further that the report of the scientists has been received at the President's office but that it has not yet been evaluated by the White House staff.

We are glad to see that Senator Symington of Missouri, as a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, is immediately interested. He and other members of Congress can be sure that countless Americans are waiting for forthright, direct clarification at the highest level of our Government.

There Are Other Ways . . .

On orders of Director of Corrections Carter, guards at the Missouri Penitentiary now are walking their posts without the canes, clubs and night sticks that have symbolized their authority. Mr. Carter believes this will insure more humane treatment of the prisoners, some of whom he admits have been mistreated by guards.

Most Missourians will approve the idea of treating the state's prisoners humanely, and will hope that Mr. Carter extends the principle to all areas of the sprawling Jefferson City institution. We refer specifically to "O Hall," perhaps the most unhappy installation in the penitentiary. It is the "hole," where men are held in solitary confinement.

Gov. Donnelly's study committee recommended changes which would alleviate some of the medieval aspects of this chamber of horrors, and presumably Mr. Carter has acted on those suggestions. In our opinion, however, that is not enough. Mr. Carter ought to see what can be done about abolishing the type of confinement practiced in "O Hall." There are other ways and less sadistic ways of punishing prisoners.

The Sod Hut Period

Americans are well acquainted with "period" rooms in art museums illustrating Italian renaissance carving or Louis Sixteenth gilt, and homes across the land are filled with copies of Sheraton or Duncan Phyfe furniture. But when it comes to "periods," whoever heard of the prairie period? There was one.

The Kansas State Historical Society has recreated in its Topeka museum a sod house. These were a common sight on the prairies from the time of settlement to the turn of the century. A sod hut, as it was generally known, was first a matter of necessity on the Great Plains. There was almost no timber.

Hence the early settler plowed a half-acre of ground, cut thick strips of turf into three-foot bricks, and laid these up into a wall. The joints were broken as in bricklaying, and the cracks were filled with dirt. Door and window frames, if any, were wood.

The sod hut on display in Topeka now is a one-room structure (most were) with rough board floors covered with buffalo hides. The walls are papered with old newspapers. The furniture is the sturdy simple stuff which would stand a long trip in a covered wagon.

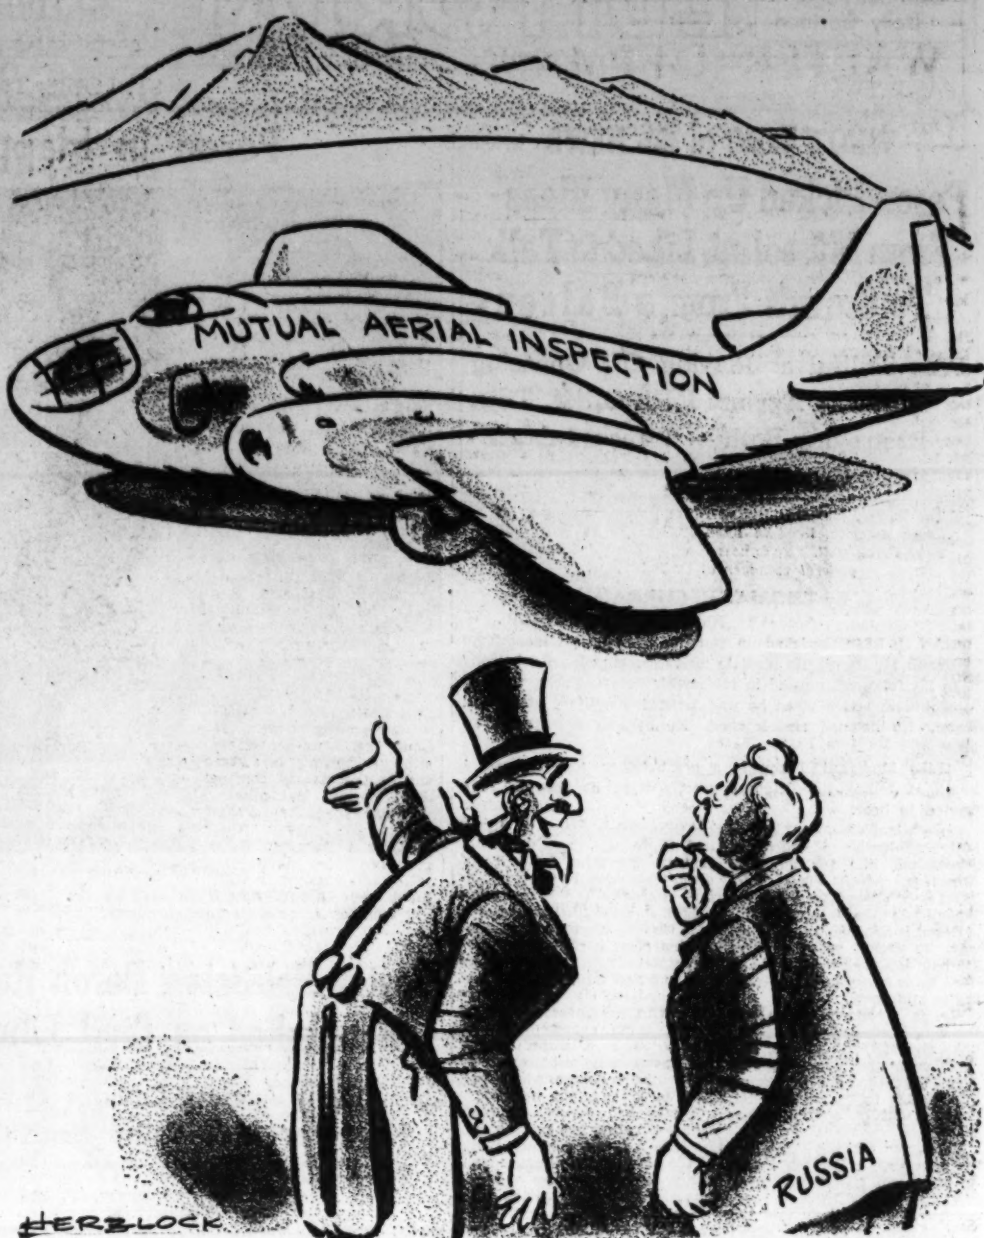

Today a grass-covered mound here and there on the prairie points a period to the sod-hut period. No Kansan mourns the passing of the sod house, and nobody reveres its craftsmanship. But nobody can say that the sod house was not original and functional.

Where Responsibility Lies

Prosecuting Attorney Garnholz of St. Louis county has announced that the next grand jury will be instructed to investigate every area in the county where there is a stream pollution problem. This is good politics for Mr. Garnholz, of course, but it is also good government.

The Metropolitan St. Louis Sewer District was created to tackle the area's sewer problems, including most of those in St. Louis county. But since none of the District's officials is directly responsible to the people through the elective process, a grand jury inquiry is one of the few methods the people enjoy for calling the District to account.

The last county grand jury pioneered in this field and it served the cause of public enlightenment. In the future, however, grand juries ought to go to the top. The Sewer District's top men, its board of directors, ought to be called to make an accounting. They are principally responsible for the District's triumphs or its shortcomings.

Are Subversives Really Subversive?

The Mirror
Public Opinion

Despite cooling of emotions, many Americans still are being put through Attorney General Brownell's security apparatus; its methods are repugnant to a society which believes heresy is not an official concern, and Government reveals no justifying facts.

Walter Millis in The Saturday Review

There is much to suggest that the impassioned pursuit of "internal security" is subsiding. But the massive edifice of "internal security" built up over the past 10 years stands virtually unimpaired.

People are still being hauled up by the hundreds, if not the thousands, before secret tribunals on anonymous charges of "security risk"; they are being suspended and often fired not only from federal employment ("a privilege and not a right") but from jobs in great areas of wholly private employment in the defense and maritime industries as well.

A large part of the FBI's activities are still those of a secret political police; and it is asking authority from Congress to extend its pursuit of potential (not actual) spies, saboteurs, and "subversives" through further wide areas of private industry. And the Attorney General is still clinging as doggedly as ever to the basic rationale, the still unproven assumptions, on which this remarkable structure rests.

Weapons Used in War on Hersey

The political police structure is engaged, as Brownell frankly puts it, on a "drive to exterminate the Communist party and Communist espionage in this country."

To these ends it feels it necessary to use the eavesdropper (or wiretapper), the police "plant," the paid informer, the anonymous accuser, the protected volunteer gossip, the self-incriminating oath, the secret trial and conviction—the immemorial and probably indispensable weapons of any war upon heresy.

All are repugnant to a society which founded its institutions upon a belief that heresy (whether political or religious) was no longer of importance to government and heretical opinion no longer a proper subject of governmental concern. Nor has the Attorney General any direct legal mandate to "exterminate the Communist party."

'Irresponsible Police Power'

There are probably few today who could deny that American Communism does actually represent what can only be described as a political heresy, and that as such it raises some dangers.

But is there anything in fact to sustain the necessity for such extreme measures, or to substantiate the Attorney General's picture of the perils from which he is defending us? He grants that the internal security system is often at variance with established ideas of individual right; but he insists that in such cases "the general welfare of all our people is paramount to any one individual."

It is a "solemn obligation" to take "every possible precaution to safeguard against any disaster that could result from disloyal people or those who are security risks being placed in any position where irreparable harm could result"—however slight, apparently, that "irreparable" harm might be.

Those who have been inclined to question such sweeping claims to irresponsible police power are brusquely divided by the Attorney General into two groups: "the Communist conspiracy," their apologists, and dupes," and "sincere persons who have never been confronted with the awesome responsibility for internal security and who do not know the hard facts."

But if there are any "hard" facts which remain unknown it is mainly because of the persistent unwillingness or inability in the Government to give a straight account of them.

One receives only such vague and at times almost preposterous generalities as the Attorney General repeats, as in the statement that even the few Communists remaining in the country (party membership is estimated to be down to about 23,000) are a peril because similar small Communist groups in Russia, China, and Italy grew swiftly to millions "when favorable situations" arose.

Brownell cannot seriously believe there is a danger of the Eisenhower Administration, or any possible successor, creating in this country "favorable situations" comparable to those in Russia, China or even Italy.

What he really thinks perhaps comes out in the remark that if there were "only a handful of Communists" among us they "would still present a danger because they are dedicated to overthrowing our way of life"—because, in other words, they are heretics.

Rests on Fear and Assumptions

The truth seems to be that the great structure of internal security does not rest upon hard facts at all, but on a series of indefinite fears and unverifiable assumptions.

Some of these assumptions are: that all Government secrets are of vital importance; that all federal and many millions of private posts are "sensitive"; that it is possible to determine with considerable accuracy whether a person is a "security risk"; that not only all Communists but all persons with any past Communist leanings or associations are risks.

Finally, there is the general assumption that by creating a massive inquisitorial system, it is possible to contribute materially to the national security.

Mythologies of the Cold War

Only by accepting them all as articles of faith can one sustain the structure of a secret political police and a security bureaucracy which we have, almost absentmindedly, as it were, erected up on them.

Those who suggest that it be restrained more closely within the limits of common sense and fair dealing are not proposing that the doors be opened to "spies and subversives."

They are saying that the whole system contributes very little to the real military or even political security of the state, and when all its undoubtedly adverse effects are taken into consideration the balance might well be on the negative side.

And if such suspicions proceed from an ignorance of "hard" facts one could wish that the Government could give just a few really hard facts to dispute them, rather than further repetitions of the fear-bred mythologies of the Cold War.

'PINNACLE OF GADGETRY'

From The Milwaukee Journal.

This is becoming a push button world much faster than most of us imagine. In Ladysmith—South Africa, not Wisconsin—a retired meteorologist has just taken out a patent on a new type fishing reel. It's automatic and brings in fish by itself.

This strikes us as the pinnacle of gadgetry. Now if someone would invent a self-casting rod a fisherman wouldn't have to move a muscle. Nor would he have much fun. Landing a fish automatically is something like providing a robot to kiss your wife or firing a stand-in to drink your gin and tonic.

The reel's inventor says he's confident that he'll find markets for it at home and abroad. He's probably right. There's a growing generation of fishermen who really prefer gadgets to fishing itself.

The Man in the Iron Cask

BEDMAN OF ALCAZAR, by Thomas P. Gaddis.

(Random House, 32 pp., $1.25.)

Hats off to this author for pulling off a rare coup. Buried in Alcatraz he has found one of the most remarkable convicts any prison ever held, and certainly one who is unique in American penal annals. Mr. Gaddis not only discovered him, but learned his amazing story, and has now written this utterly fascinating book about him. I cannot remember when last I came upon a character so genuinely unique, and the marvel of it all is that he really exists.

The merest outline of the facts is enough to raise the reader's hackles. The living troglodyte Mr. Gaddis has put into his book is named Robert F. Stroud, better known as No. 594, Alcatraz. He went to jail for the murder of a rival suitor in a sordid brawl in Alaska. Then, in 1916, he killed a guard in Leavenworth Prison and was sentenced to life imprisonment. The warden swore Stroud would spend his life in solitary confinement, and he has.

As the author puts it: "There is a man living in Alcatraz today who has been kept by the United States in a solitary cell since 1916. When steel doors first shut behind him, Teddy Roosevelt was President. He was in jail before there were income taxes. He has never seen an airplane on the ground, never observed a traffic light, never shifted gears. He has not broken bread with another human being since Woodrow Wilson adjusted his glasses and signed a declaration of war against the Kaiser. He has been kept in isolation for 39 years, longer than any other federal prisoner in history."

Though the warden has refused to let him associate with other human beings, Stroud in time found companionship with birds, and became one of the country's leading authorities on canaries. His book on diseases of the canary, smuggled out of prison and published in 1933, still circulates briskly in libraries. There was a time when his cell resounded with the chirping of over 500 birds, but 13 years ago he gave up his work with them. He wrote another and more authoritative work on birds, but the prison authorities have blocked every effort to smuggle it out. The story of Stroud's last attempt to get the manuscript out is more fantastic than anything ever dreamed up by a thriller writer.

This is the extraordinary life story which Mr. Gaddis has filled in with revealing detail, some of which has to be read to be believed. Stroud is not a dangerous prisoner or insane, nor have prison walls and iron-handed wardens succeeded in breaking his will. He gathers, he still hopes to receive his release through presidential pardon, and that, should this happen, he plans to create a 10-acre sanctuary for birds.

Most readers of this book (and I hope there will be many of them) will probably be as shocked by it as this reviewer was. Any man who has served so long in prison has surely paid his debt to civilized society, and if this book succeeds in focusing attention on this monstrous case and in winning a release for Stroud, chalk that up as another asset of this astonishing story.

America's Greatest Poet?

WALT WHITMAN'S POEMS, edited by Gay Wilson Allen and Charles T. Davis. (New York University Press, $3.75.)

As the editors point out in their foreword, Walt Whitman has received more attention as a personality than as a poet. This imbalance they now seek to correct in this book, in which they reprint some 40 of the poems, together with a critical analysis of their structure, style and meaning. They look upon Whitman as the greatest poet America has yet produced, a verdict which, though open to question, is close enough to the weight of critical opinion. The notes are illuminating and helpful, and are the more valuable because the editors deal with the poems rather than with the theories or characteristics of the man who wrote them.

WALTER LIPPMANN

Our Silly Claim on Adenauer in Russia

IN THE ABSENCE of Secretary Dulles who was still on vacation, the State Department's talking bureaucrats, unable to stop, look and listen, proclaimed "the abandonment now by the Soviet Union of its bankrupt German policy." This was an example of massive silliness, inspired by the most wishful kind of thinking.

Even if it had been true that the Soviet government has acknowledged the abandonment of its German policy, it would have been reckless and silly for the State Department to let out a hoop about it, and to point with pride to its own success. If, for example it had been true that Dr. Adenauer was invited to the Soviet capital "over the head of Moscow's satellite government in East Germany," the State Department's boasting and bragging about its own triumph would have been sufficient to compel Moscow to save its own face and the face of the East Germans by inviting Grotewohl to follow Adenauer to Moscow.

Actually, Grotewohl had been invited to Moscow last July. There is, as a matter of fact, not a word of truth in the statement that the Soviet Union has abandoned its German policy. Diplomatic relations have been established with Bonn alongside of, not in place of, the relations which already exist with Pankow in East Germany.

Relations Useful to Both.

There are oral assurances that prisoners are to be released. But far from "abandoning" its policy, the Soviet Union has reaffirmed categorically that its policy is still to approach reunification through both German governments, and that it regards the Potsdam provisional frontier as permanent.

In view of the results, the State Department might have omitted the jubilation, might in fact have reserved its comment. The interesting thing about Adenauer's Moscow visit is that both parties thought it useful to establish diplomatic relations and at the same time to declare publicly their positions, which are as they knew irreconcilable. There is in this an implicit agreement that for some time to come they can live side by side, they can trade, they can meet and they can talk, even though all the big issues remain unsettled. It may be said, therefore, that Bonn and Moscow have negotiated a modus vivendi.

Though both governments look beyond this modus vivendi to a settlement, neither is acting as if it expected to see a settlement in the near future.

Strong National Feeling. Mr. Adenauer cannot suppose that the Soviet Union is going to grant him the terms he has laid down. The terms include not only the surrender of East Germany but also a territorial settlement at the expense of the postwar Polish state.

The Soviet terms are equally outside the limits of a negotiated settlement. They call for a reunited Germany in which the German Communists from East Germany will be a power, and they call for a European security arrangement which in effect disestablishes the Western military system.

Neither in Bonn or in Moscow are there as yet the makings of a negotiable settlement. We all know, of course, that the existing modus vivendi is provisional, and that in one way or another serious negotiations for a settlement will eventually be brought about. But what will bring about serious negotiations?

Michigan Democrat Was Expert on Taxes—Had Served Since 1932.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (UP)—Representative John D. Dingell (Dem.), Michigan, a member of Congress since 1932 and an expert on taxes, died last night of heart disease at the Army's Walter Reed Hospital. He was 61 years old.

He was the first member of the Eighty-fourth Congress to die.

He went into office on the New Deal sweep in 1932 and had served ever since, rising to second-ranking Democrat on the tax-drafting House Ways and Means Committee. In that capacity, he had a hand in most of the important tax legislation shaped by Congress in recent years.

Dingell entered the hospital Friday. His condition had not been considered serious, but he took a turn for the worse last night.

At his bedside were his wife, Grace, and two of their three children, James Victor and Julie Jane. A second son, John David Jr., was in Detroit and

'WOODEN DISH' HAS THE SOUND OF A HIT

Premiere of Louis Calhern Drama at American Is Poignant, Realistic.

By MYLES STANDISH

The American Theater opened its 1955-56 season last night with a brand-new play being given its American premiere on its pre-Broadway tour, "The Wooden Dish," a drama by Edmund Morris, starring Louis Calhern. The work, by a tyro stage dramatist known only for his TV writing, and of which little has been heard concerning its tryout in London a year ago, came as a pleasant surprise. It had the resounding impact, to these ears, of a palpable hit. It had poignancy, honesty and an uncompromising realism illuminated by a remarkably good ensemble acting job.

Anyone who would open a play in a theater not blessed by an air-cooling system in St. Louis in mid-September is either an optimist or a gambler; and in the steamy confines of the American last night, with the men spectators discarding dignity and jackets, and the audience a flurry of fluttering programs, the play was subjected to a really grueling test. But it came through with flying colors. After a rather tentative first act in which it did little more than draw the pattern of its situation, it obviously gripped and moved its audience through the angry conflicts of its second act right on through to its bitter third-act curtain line.

It is not a pretty picture that Mr. Morris draws in this tale of an unwanted old man, Pop Denison, played by Mr. Calhern, is somewhere around 80 and has become something of a nuisance to his son Glenn, a truck driver, and Glenn's wife, Clara, with whom Pop lives in a small Texas town. The son is willing enough to put up with him, but his garrulousness and his sloppiness have taxed the nerves of his daughter-in-law to the screaming point after 17 years. She finds the old man an intolerable burden and dreams of enjoying life free of him. She has nagged Glenn into reaching an agreement with Floyd, the only other brother who even evinced an interest in their father's fate, to put Pop into an old folks home.

Shame-facedly, the brothers work on their shoddy plot behind their father's back, the sales patter of the unctuous proprietor of the home doesn't disguise the fact it is a shabby poor-farm, and Pop, when he learns about it, says he'd rather die than go there. Clara serves an ultimatum on her wavering husband that she'll leave him if he backs out of the deal, and she actually makes a desperate arrangement to run off with an earthy male boarder before her shocked daughter, a girl of 18, prevents her. The old man resolved the impasse himself in a final gesture.

Harsh and acrid as it sometimes is as it looks on love smothered by selfishness, the playwright's dissection of his characters is not pitiless. Rather it is ruefully understanding. Clara is hard and bitter, but she has had a lot to put up with; at 37, she feels the years slipping by and thinks she's entitled to some fun before she gets old, too. Her husband isn't mean; he's trying to get along with his wife and make her happy. His brother thinks his duty lies in providing for his own wife and children, and in an ironic scene, weeps over what he is doing to his father, as Pop comforts him. The boarder, amoral as he is, demures over running off with his friend's wife; she has to goad him into the idea.

Mr. Calhern, lean and sagging in rumpled clothing, gave a virtuoso performance of the rambling but spirited old fellow, but all the roles count in this, and he has directed the rest of the cast into some vital, forceful and very naturalistic performances. Polly Rowles was impassioned and angry as the frustrated Clara. James Westfield's Floyd was a striking portrait of a naturally kind man struggling between conscience and convenience. Gordon Tanner's Glenn was the acme of the harried compromise. John Randolph was a casually lusty and insensitive boarder. Jacqueline Scott was impressive as the impulsive granddaughter whose decency put her parents to shame. Edgar Stehl contributed a strong bit as an old friend of Pop's.

Donald Oenslager's cutaway set of the Ennison house was quite ingenious. The play which will open in New York Oct. 6, will run the week at the American.

Funeral services for Eugene M. Funsten, retired board chairman of the Funsten nut company will be tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the Lupton undertaking establishment, 7233 Delmar boulevard, University City, with burial in Bellefontaine cemetery.

Mr. Funsten, 70 years old, died yesterday at Barnes Hospital after a long illness.

With two brothers, Edward S. Funsten, mayor of Ladue, and the late Fairfax Funsten, Mr. Funsten managed the R. E. Funsten Dried Fruit and Nut Co. which had been founded in 1895 by their father, Robert Emmett Funsten.

The business, which as the R. E. Funsten Co. became the dominant one in the pecan shelling and marketing industry in this country, was sold in 1947 when Mr. Funsten retired to a 4000-acre plantation near Albany, Ga.

There, he began raising quail for sport and he and his wife, Mrs. Holmes Thomsen Funsten, entertained large groups of St. Louisans during the hunting season. He also raised pecans and peanuts for the market.

He was active in the Wildlife Association of Missouri and in various national organizations for the preservation of wildlife and the selective breeding of hunting dogs.

The family also has a home at 1146 Hampton drive, Richmond Heights. Surviving, in addition to his wife and brother, is a sister, Mrs. Herbert Durand, Bronxville, N.Y.

MRS. ROOSEVELT INVITED TO RUSSIA BY MOLOTOV

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has received a personal invitation from Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, to visit Russia "any time and bring anyone you wish."

Mrs. Roosevelt is not sure she will accept, however. She wants to be certain she would be "going for a purpose" beyond mere travel for travel's sake.

Mrs. Roosevelt told reporters yesterday that while en route by plane from Paris to New York Sunday she had chatted with the Soviet diplomat, who was on his way to the United Nations General Assembly session.

Mrs. Roosevelt last July canceled a proposed trip to Russia for Look magazine because the Soviet government failed to provide a visa for an editor of the magazine to go with her. Molotov assured her that nothing like the visa fiasco would occur again, Mrs. Roosevelt said.

Rip 'Em Up, Tear 'Em Up;
Of Washington's Bears.

WHEN CARL SNAVELY and other Washington University coaches are inclined to use top sergeant lung capacity to call for a player, there are a few times when they've got to pause to keep from being run over.

It's double trouble of the "unrelated" variety on the Hilltop, as Publicist MARJIE SUSMAN put it, because of a confusion in surnames.

The Bears have two BOL-LINGERS, Mike, a blocking back, and Bill, a guard. They've got two LADDS, Bob, a blocking back, and Dave, a guard. There are two of the inevitable JONES boys, Wingback Jim and Guard Duane, and, sounding alike if not spelled the same, are Tailback MEL SIEGEL and Blocking Back MIKE SIEGEL.

Those Bears aren't related, but, speaking of relatives, Fullback RICHARD LONG-SON is the son of Wild Bill, the wrestler, and End JACK RAPP's father will be well-remembered at St. Louis University as MANUEL (FAT) RAPP, fullback star for CHILE WALSH's strong teams of the early '30s. Nope, fellas, can't call Fat a traitor out at Grand and Lindell. Not until you go get a football and a team again.

Snavely could have given DON FAUROT a lecture on the importance of the extra point because the Bears lost twice last year by failure to convert, 7-6 to Western Michigan and 20-19 to Bradley. Faurot, however, had the heartburn of near-miss before Mizou's 13-12 defeat to Maryland. In 1949 the Tigers bowed to Ohio State, bowed to the Rose Bowl, 35 to 34, and Southern Methodist headed for Cotton Bowl, 28 to 27.

Would Eliot Agree?

IN the language of JERRY LISKA, Chicago Associated Press writer, RAY ELIOT of Illinois, whose highly-touted team had only a dismal 1-8 record last year, now is the "year pressure" coach in the Big Ten Conference. The Illini were picked ninth this year in a poll of 16 writers who made a flying tour of the conference campuses and, surprisingly, tabbed Purdue to tie Michigan for the title.

STU HOLCOMB'S admission he had the best Buller-maker squad in nine seasons, plus Quarterback LEN DAWSON, even got Purdue more first-place votes—eight—than the Wolverines, whose favoritism also reflected the ability of one man, End RON KRAMER, Ohio State defending champion, was picked third, then Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan State, Indiana, Minnesota, Illinois and Northwestern.

TOM NUGENT, coach of up-and-coming Florida State, a 7-0 opening-game victor over North Carolina State just seven years after it was only a girls school, is most candid. The Seminoles' schedule is strong, yes, but it won't do until Florida University is met. "We want to play big-time football," said Nugent, "but until we play Florida and beat 'em, we don't have a good argument for a fair share of the money (race track scholarship funds) to get the players." Florida won't play the Tallahassee upstarts unless compelled by the Legislature.

BENNY FRIEDMAN, Brandeis University coach, will require his players to wear transparent plastic face masks when they open Saturday (against Boston College) because of a study which showed that more than 50 per cent of football injuries were to the face. . . . Oklahoma holds the national record of having scored in 95 consecutive games, followed by Rutgers in 87 and Colorado in 76 successive contests.

Quick Kicks.

DUFFY DAUGHERTY, Michigan State coach whose young team kicks off against a veteran Indiana eleven, observed that 45 of his 71 players are sophomores and quipped, "Well, this might not add up to a good football team, but it sure ought to be good for program sales. Can't tell 'em without a scorecard."

Before hurrying to a TV set to watch the Georgia Tech-Miami game—Notre Dame has been doped by some experts to lose Oct. 7 in the Florida metropolis—TERRY BRENNAN grumbled that the Irish "looked sluggish" as the first two teams beat the third and fourth elevens Saturday, 39 to 7. Notre Dame opens Saturday, at home against Southern Methodist with a 66-year record of 424 victories, 86 defeats and 34 ties for a terrific .831 percentage. N.D. has had 18 unbeaten seasons, 10 of which they weren't tied, either.

VIC EATON, former Missouri quarterback apparently has made the Pittsburgh Steelers as No. 1 punter, but Fullback BOB BAUMAN, dropped by the Montreal Alouettes, has returned to Columbia and his textbooks. The reason Arkansas JACK MITCHELL has his halfbacks face in toward the quarterback—a version of the Split-T called the Pigeon-Toed T—is because the former Oklahoma star believes the unorthodox stance gives his halfbacks an extra step on quick-openers.

Yankees Score 3 Runs in First Against Senators' McDermott

Cleveland At Chicago Tonight

Yankees-Senators

(Day Game.)
NEW YORK (At Washington)
3 0 1 0 1 0 1

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (UP)—Neither starting pitcher Don Larsen of the Yankees nor Mickey McDermott of the Washington Senators lasted two innings here this afternoon as the New York club attempted another stride toward clinching the American League pennant. It was the first part of a day-night doubleheader, forced by the postponement of the scheduled series opener last night.

The Yankees needed any combination of five victories of their own or Cleveland defeats to settle the race mathematically. The second-place Indians were scheduled to play at Chicago tonight.

The weather here was sunny and warm and attendance for the matinee was about 2000.

The Yankees got off to a flying start, bunting three hits for as many runs off McDermott in the first inning. Cerv singled and scored on McDougald's double to the center field wall. Bauer hit to Valdivielso, whose throw to third, trying for McDougald, was late. A fielder's choice and a pass to Berra filled the bases and the second run scored on a force play at second before Howard singled to drive in Bauer for No. 3.

Two walks by Larsen set up the Senators' first run in their first turn at bat, with Roy Sievers knocking it across with a single.

McDermott issued two more passes in the Yankees' second and was removed in favor of Camillo Pascual. Larsen, too, was taken out in the second after he walked the first two Washington batters. Tom Morgan, after getting the head man on an attempted sacrifice, walked Yost to fill the bases and Runnels singled to score Valdivielso. A double play got Morgan out of the jam.

Bauer's double set up the fourth New York tally in the third. He took third after Berra's liner to Paula and scored on Skowron's foul to Vernon near the stands.

In the fifth, New York's fifth run resulted from singles by McDougald and Berra and Collins' fly to Umphlett in deep center. Collins has a pinch-hitter for Skowron.

Benny Richter Gains Senior District Golf Pro Title 3rd Time

The veteran left-handed Benny Richter of Belleview Country Club is the district senior professional golf champion for the third straight year.

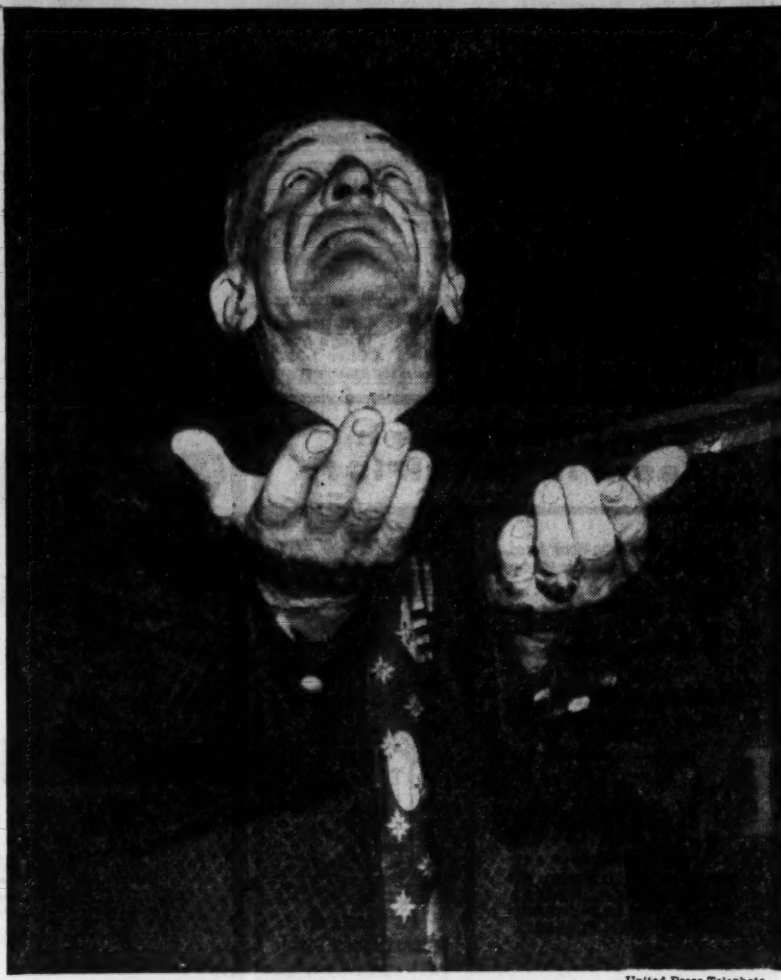

In the meet qualifying him for an all-expense trip to Dunedin, Fla., to play in the National Senior Pro Tournament next January, Richter shot his second successive 73 at Meadowbrook Country Club.

Following Richter and his 146, the only two other contestants in the tourney for players over 50, Jim Cockburn and Alex Ayton, finished with 78-75—153 and 78-80—158.

Turpin Beats Smith.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Sept. 20 (AP)—Randy Turpin, former world middleweight champion, last night slammed Ed (Polly) Smith of Bermuda all over the ring to win the decision in a 10-round light heavyweight match.

Look What Just Blew In!

Arriving in succession at Washington were (1) CASEY STENGEL, manager of the league-leading New York Yankees and (2) an advance warning of Hurricane Irene, rain that forced postponement of a night-game series opener with the Senators. Cal Griffith, Washington executive, wanted to double up by rescheduling to make a twilight-night twinnbill, but Stengel held out for an afternoon-night card to give the Yanks a square meal between games and a better chance, rested, to win two. As Ol' Case told young Griffith, "I ain't gotta do it." And he didn't.

Lane Wants to Quit Sox; Heard Indirectly Three Other Clubs Interested

CHICAGO, Sept. 20 (AP)—Frank Lane says he definitely has made up his mind to quit as general manager of the Chicago White Sox.

He will ask for cancellation of his contract, which has another five years to go, at a meeting with Mrs. Grace Comiskey, club president. The conference is expected within two or three days and Lane has asked that Vice-President Charles Comiskey and other Sox directors be present.

Lane, who in the last seven years has pulled some 200 deals involving about 300 players in trying to give the White Sox their first pennant since 1919, says his position with the Sox is untenable because of young Comiskey.

"I told Mrs. Comiskey in a phone conversation yesterday that I had suffered in silence at her son's sniping for five years," Lane said. "But when he publicly tried to discredit me, that was different."

The 59-year-old general manager referred to Comiskey's ridicule of Lane for violent language when he stormed to the box of Will Harridge, American League president, and his umpire supervisor. The night of Aug. 26 in Comiskey Park.

Lane protested an umpire's decision. The scene led to Lane being fined $500 by Commissioner Ford Frick.

Lane also said he had learned that young Comiskey had contacted Sox coaches on returning to the team in 1956.

Beard Pitches Houston to 3-2 Win in Play-Off

HOUSTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—Shreveport generosity and another superb pitching job by Ralph Beard handed the Houston Buffs a 3-2 victory and a 3-1 edge in the Texas League Shaughnessy-playoffs final round here last night before a crowd of 9035 paying fans.

All the scoring came in two innings, the Buffs putting together a pair of hits, a walk, two Sport errors and a wild pitch by Shreveport starter Ray Knoblauch for three first-inning runs. The Sports' two runs came off a walk to Joe Koppe and Ev Joyner's 340-foot home run over the right field fence in the eighth.

Joyner's home broke up a shutout performance by the Buffs' Beard and represented the first Shreveport run off Buff pitching in 20 playoff innings.

Bob Boyd opened Houston's first with a single and promptly stole second. Gil Daley walked, but Willie Brown forced him at second. Hal Smith, singled off Knoblauch's shift to score Boyd and Koppe fielded the ball and threw wild at second, trying for Brown. Big Willie promptly headed for third and right fielder Pidge Brown's throw to third bounced into the stands. Brown scoring and Smith taking third. Smith then romped home on a wild pitch by Knoblauch.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 20 (AP)—The Mobile Bears went ahead of Birmingham in their see-saw battle for the Southern Association playoff title with a 3-1 victory behind Fred Klipp's pitching.

The victory, coming on switch hitter Chris Kitos's two-run homer in the third inning, gave the Bears a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven final.

Orioles Recall Hurler.

BOSTON, Sept. 20 (UP)—The Baltimore Orioles today recalled right-handed Pitcher Bob Harrison from Wichita in the Western League. Harrison set a Western League record this season by posting 170 strikeouts in 208 innings. He had a 14-12 record at Wichita.

Slade Is Easy Winner in Bout With McBride

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (AP)—When Jimmy Slade feels like moving, he's hard to catch. The shifty New York heavyweight was in the mood to move last night and he easily outpointed lumbering Archie McBride of Trenton, N.J., in a television 10-rounder at St. Nicholas Arena.

Outweighed 180 to 180, Jimmy flitted backwards and sideways and often behind the bewildered Jerseyite. Usually, when stalking Archie figured he had caught up with Slade, Jimmy would jab Jim on the nose or hook him to the jaw or stomach.

Until he tired after the seventh round, Slade's boxing lesson wasn't too hard to take. But after the seventh he tired and contented himself with loafing and holding. The few fans in the house who had braved a threat of hurricane lone then booed Jimmy for his lazy tactics and McBride for his ineptness.

The votes of the officials, all favoring Slade, were: Judge Bill Recht, 7-2-1, Judge Leo Birnbaum, 6-3-1, and Referee Mark Conn, 6-4-1.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—The New York Yankees recalled catcher Lou Berberet from Toronto of the International League. Berberet, 25, batted 262 in 115 games with 15 home runs and 53 runs batted in for the second place Maple Leafs this season. He is to report immediately.

C.B.C. Criss-Cross Crosses Up McKinley

By Dukes Duford and Amadeo

Babe Murphy's C.B.C. team effectively employed a criss-cross play to aid them in the 20-6 victory over McKinley High in the football opener for both schools. The Cadets, in possession of the ball on McKinley's 10-yard line, lined up in a T-formation, while the Goldbugs used a 6-2-3 defense. Quarterback BOB GUION (1) took the ball from center and Capt. RUSS BALDWIN (9) spun left and faked a hand-off to Fullback BOB SANSONE (3) who cut over his left tackle. Guion continued the spin and gave the ball to left halfback TOM McDONNEL (4) who crossed over to his right side. He found a nice hole between the defensive tackle and end made by some fine criss-cross blocking by Tackle STAN DOMIJAN (11) and GLEN MERZ (6). On through the line McDONNEL side-stepped cleverly, and, with a timely block on the safety man by Tackle WILLIE GERMAIN (7), scampered untouched to the end zone for the final score of the game.

Michigan End Hurt; May Be Out for Season
 ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 20 (AP)—End Tom Maentz was lost to the University of Michigan football team for at least six weeks yesterday because of a back injury. Michigan plays Missouri Saturday.
 University doctors said he may be out for the entire season with a cracked vertebra suffered in Saturday's scrimmage. Maentz's loss was a shattering blow to Michigan's hopes for the Big Ten title, a Rose Bowl bid and perhaps even a national championship.
 He sometimes was referred to as "the other end" on the Michigan team because he was overshadowed by All America prospect Ben Kramer at the other end of the line.
 But some football experts

Michigan End Hurt; May Be Out for Season

rated Maentz only a shade behind Kramer, especially as a pass receiver.
 Coach Bennie Oosterbaan said "it's a terrific blow—one of the worst things that could have happened to us." He was undecided who would move to fill Maentz' vacancy.
 "It'll either be Mike Rotunno or Charley Brooks," Oosterbaan said, "and it looks like Brooks right now since he was playing at that position."

Bob Peoples, Former Javelin Champ, Dies
 LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20 (AP)—Robert E. (Bob) Peoples, former University of Southern California football and track star, died at his West Los Angeles home Sunday night. He was 36.

Peoples still held the National High School javelin record of 219 feet which he set in 1937 while a student at Classen High School in Oklahoma City.

Peoples once was National Collegiate javelin champion and on May 17, 1941 set an American record of 234 ft. 3½ in. The mark has since been eclipsed.

Arena Figure Skating Club To Be Revived

By Neal Russo

The only man who had a list of the members was in Europe when the notices went out, but a very good turnout of 40 was on hand for the reactivation of the Arena Figure Skating Club last night at the Chase Hotel.
 Dormant five years, the club voted to get back on the ice chiefly because of plans to build a $1,000,000 outdoor rink in Forest Park in time for the 1956 skating season.
 All the votes went the same way—for reviving the skating club. Then temporary officers were chosen. Nick Skrainka chairman and this executive committee: Elenore Meyer, Robert Knoll, Roland Stocke, Robert Geekie, Mary Abele, Mrs. Gene Olufson, Frank Berghold. Stocke was the man from Europe.

Every skater who showed up got an opportunity to speak as N. H. Von Soosten conducted the meeting following a talk by Joe Forsaw, 74-year-old skating veteran. The chief topic was the club's place in the picture when the projected outdoor rink becomes something more than a blueprint.

Urge Large Rink.
 Taking a cue from Lamar Ottsen, president of the Amateur Skating Union of the United States, the members urged that as large a rink as possible be built in Forest Park to accommodate both speed and figure skaters.

Ottsen, who made a special study of the huge outdoor rink in New York City, said it appeared that St. Louis probably will have a rectangular rink 140 feet by 260. That would be, according to Ottsen, the nation's largest artificial outdoor rink. Although frankly admitting he preferred a rink 160 by 300 feet, Ottsen said the 140 by 260 would be quite adequate enough to enable 5000-plus to skate comfortably at the same time.

The rectangular plan is favored over the trapezoidal type used in the New York rink, Ottsen said, because the large ends of a trapezoidal are not used much. Instead, they're used for the sale of small pizza pies to skaters who thus can reach for the delicacy without getting off the ice.

Agree to Free Clinic.
 "It would be absurd," Ottsen said, "to put in a million dollars for an outdoor rink the size of an indoor rink." Ottsen pointed out that the Missouri Skating Association, approached by the City of St. Louis on the possibility of a free clinic for boys and girls, agreed to such a program.

Dan O'Connor, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Skating Union, said that the Missouri group was shooting for a membership of 700 boys and girls for whom joining would be made easy in connection with the new outdoor rink.
 Jeanne Berman, a veteran show skater, urged that the figure skating groups expand to bring in as many prospects as possible for the various meets held across the nation.

Forshaw traced the growth of ice skating in the area and the part the Arena Figure Skating Club played, including the big show in 1945 at Forest Park.

 Charity Doled Out.
 She headed the Eva Peron Foundation which doled out charity—and filled its coffers from funds voted by Congress or the one day's pay which the Peron-sponsored General Confederation of Labor ordered every worker to pay with a smile. There was no public accounting of these funds. Touring Europe, she was received by the Pope and feted in Madrid, Lisbon and Paris.
 The Perons bought and controlled newspapers to spread the Peronista party line, under cover of government control of newspaper supplies, most of the press was forced to hew a pro-Peron line. But La Prensa, largest Spanish language newspaper in the world, persisted in independence.
 In early 1951, when La Prensa printed a statement by opposition railway strikers, news vendors attached to the Confederation of Labor started a boycott and the paper was forced to close. It was later turned over to the labor federation.
 The Peronistas rewrote the constitution so Peron could seek a second term. In 1951 the Perons prepared to run as a team, with Eva as vice president, but she was compelled to renounce the honor when the army rebelled at "petticoat rule."

A luckless revolt Sept. 28, 1951, permitted Peron to declare a state of internal war, prevent opposition political rallies and arrest opposition political leaders almost at will. Many were jailed on charges of "desecration" or disrespect of the president.
 There was an element of unreality about the revolt. The government radio announced it had broken out at 11:10 a.m. and said it was all over at 12:57 p.m. There was a skirmish or two at a cavalry school, one or two fist fights in Buenos Aires and a flight of 40-odd military men to Uruguay. Apparently Peron beat the plotters to the punch.
 Another 6-Year Term.
 As a result Peron was re-elected overwhelmingly in November 1951 for another six-year term.

Characteristically, Peron blamed for the revolt on old scapegoats, Spruille Braden, former United States ambassador to Argentina at the time of the State Department's blue book. Braden said the charges were ridiculous.
 Mrs. Peron was taken ill with cancer before the election, but lingered on until after the inauguration. When she died, July 26, 1952, government-sponsored labor unions started a movement to have her declared a saint.
 Eva was not Peron's first wife. As a young army captain he married Maria Tizon, daughter of a photographer. She bore him a daughter and died in 1936, seven years after their marriage, of cancer. The rebellious navy flyers bombed Government House on the Plaza de Mayo. The army fought back. Hundreds of persons were killed. And that night, as the revolt died down, many churches in Buenos Aires were desecrated.
 The power of the laboring forces that kept Peron's hold virtually unchallenged for so long was diminished in the new strength of the army leaders who had saved Peron's neck. The President's enemies were happy. Peron bided his time for an opening to show his strength again. From time to time the Government announced it had suppressed new plots against it. Then late in August Peron passed the word to labor and Peronista forces, that he would quit if necessary to bring peace to Argentina. The political machine started moving. Labor leaders called a general strike. Workers were told to assemble and stay in the public squares of the country until Peron agreed to stay on.

 Just at dusk Aug. 31 Peron went to his balcony overlooking the Plaza de Mayo in Buenos Aires and declared he would bow to the will of the people by staying on as President.
 But last week revolt broke out again—and on a far greater scale than in June.
 Juan Peron's rule was broken.

REPLACEMENTS BEING Considered for Trio
 In International Race
 LAUREL, Md., Sept. 20 (UP)—Three replacements for injured horses were under consideration for invitations to the Washington (D.C.) International turf race at Laurel Nov. 11 with Traffic Judge, Jet Action and Duke's Lea joining the possible American starters.
 They took the place of Saratoga, who broke a bone in his left rear foot during the Discovery Handicap Sept. 10; Swaps, now recovering in California from an operation on his right front foot; and Rejected, who will not be up to his best form after temporary retirement.
 Nashua is the only horse actually invited to compete in the turf classic thus far by the board of newspaper men who selected the American representatives. Action on the bid awaits the return of owner William Woodward from Europe.
 Also under consideration are Mark-Ye-Well, Helioscope, High Gun, Platan and Social Outcast.
 Two foreign entries to accept invitations were Panasilpper, the Irish champion to race in the colors of President Sean T. O'Kelly of Ireland; and Darius, the top-ranked English four-year-old owned by Sir Percy Loraine. Other invitations to foreign horses will be extended within the next three weeks.

 NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (AP)—Exiled Buenos Aires publisher Alberto Gainza Paz said today he believes a new Argentine government would return to him the newspaper La Prensa, confiscated four years ago by the Juan D. Peron government.
 However, Gainza said it is too early to predict how soon he would be able to return to his homeland and resume publication of the famous 86-year-old daily, held by his family for three generations.

LITTLE TANGIBLE RESULT OF CREDIT CURB

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (AP).

WHAT effect have governmental credit restraints had on slowing the business boom?

Very little, so far.

The most tangible result of the money managers' moves to tighten credit has been to cause an increase in interest rates—and hence an increase in the cost of doing business—and to make the banks scurry around to find new money to lend to their many would-be borrowers.

THE MILD RESTRAINTS MAY take visible form in the months ahead. They are chiefly aimed at acting as a governor to prevent the business boom from running away. But so far there are few signs of slowing down—and many signs of more industrial and trade activity the rest of this year. Far from being deterred by higher interest rates, business men are planning to find some $7,500,000,000 to put into expansion of plants and buying of new equipment in the final months of this year.

Unimpressed by warnings that only easy credit terms could keep auto sales booming, the auto industry says it plans to turn out 1956 models at the same fast clip it set when it introduced the 1955s. Car dealers are being warned to prepare for even keener competition next year. And the industry intends to go right on expanding. General Motors and Ford have expansion programs in full swing. Chrysler has just announced a 10-year expansion program it says may even top those of its rivals. This includes construction of seven or so new regional plants.

THE HOUSING INDUSTRY WAS THOUGHT, by many to be a particular target of the credit-tightening program. And in July the starting of new homes faltered a little. But it snapped back in August and builders say the revival is lasting in September. August starts put the building pace 8 per cent higher than a year ago and almost even with the 1950 record. Tightening in mortgage money supply hasn't been felt much yet, say the bankers. Financing for new homes is still available. But the bankers believe that before much longer the money supply for new mortgages will get tight indeed. Appliances are another thing that many American families buy on time. But dealers report that the usual summer slump in sales was hard to find. They think financing of sales in the traditional big season from now till Christmas will put no brake on what they predict will be a record year. Retail hopes, indeed, are running high for record Christmas trade in all lines, whether those for which people usually pay cash or those which they usually put on the cuff.

WHAT MANUFACTURERS AGREE IS SHOWN by the orders pouring into the basic industries. Steel mills are operating only a little below capacity. Orders crowd their books for the rest of this year. Customers are asking about deliveries in the first months of 1956. There is no sign yet of any letdown in steel demand. This great indicator of the business boom still points to full steam ahead in nearby months.

Prices, as well as interest rates, have been edging higher—particularly on industrial materials and on durable goods. So far, the much feared consumer price resistance hasn't been evident. The fast business pace continues overseas. American manufacturers have been finding foreign markets a nice icing on their domestic sales cake. Exports are running well above what had been expected earlier in the year and continue to rise.

The brakes may take hold later, but as of now business is still booming.

ELY-WALKER STOCKHOLDERS ACCEPT BURLINGTON TERMS

Holders of more than 75 per cent of voting stock in Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co., 1520 Washington avenue, have accepted stock purchase terms of Burlington Industries, Inc., of Greensboro, N.C., and New York, it was announced here yesterday.

Earlier this month Burlington offered approximately $64,360,000 for all outstanding shares in the firm. It declared that it would not purchase any shares unless it could purchase at least 75 per cent of them.

The St. Louis Union Trust Co., which has been receiving stockholder acceptances, announced yesterday that the deadline for Burlington buying stock has been extended until Sept. 28. The deadline was first set at yesterday.

SOYBEANS STRONG, GRAIN PRICES MIXED

CHICAGO, Sept. 20 (AP)—Soybeans raced up several cents on the Board of Trade today, sparked by light receipts of cash soybeans. Gains ran to as much as 6 cents at one time.

Feed grains held firm most of the day, although a late slide made substantial cuts into early gains. Agriculture Secretary Benson's statement steps would be taken to halt the decline in hog prices created buying in feed grains.

Wheat firmed with the rest of the market early but developed easiness around noon. Most contracts slipped under the pressure was a factor in the turn-about in the bread cereal.

'Gracious Living' to Keep Crew Of Forrestal in Fighting Trim

Aircraft Carrier Has Air-Conditioning, Semi-Private Bunks, Dream Kitchens, Pastel Furniture.

By PAUL E. LEACH
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch
Special Dispatch. Copyright 1955.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 — There'll be all the comforts of home—and then some—on the world's biggest warship when it is turned over to the Navy next month.

The $200,000,000 Forrestal, first of five new aircraft carriers of this type to be completed, is designed to carry 90 planes. It is the latest thing in floating air bases. It will have jet bombers able to carry nuclear bombs, as well as jet fighters, to protect them and the carrier.

It will mount eight of the latest 5-inch, rapid-fire, anti-aircraft guns and is expected to do close to 35 knots at full speed. That's about 40 miles an hour. Even the light, fast, destroyers today do only a little over 30 knots.

When Capt. Roy L. Johnson of Falls Church, Va., takes the Forrestal out from the graving yards of the Newport News (Va.) Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., its 466 officers and 3360 enlisted men, including flyers, are going to start living the life of Riley.

Air-Conditioned.
The ship, named for the first Secretary of Defense, the late James V. Forrestal, is air-conditioned below decks to beat tropic heat.

There are semi-private bunks, with individual reading lights for each, plenty of mirrors with outlets for electric shavers.

There is more living space per man than on any other warship.

Sanitary facilities are more widely scattered. There are more showers, larger mess facilities with linoleum tile decks. Furniture and bulkheads are finished in pastel colors. The kitchens are a cook's dream.

In short, the Forrestal provides "gracious living" for the Navy Air Arm.

But there's nothing frivolous in that. Each innovation says the Navy, has been incorporated with a view to raising morale and keeping fighting men in battle readiness.

Deck on an Angle.
Getting down to technicalities, this 1036-foot ship—that's nearly a quarter mile—which displaces 60,000 tons, has what is called a canted deck. That is, part of the deck shoots off at an angle.

When coming in on this canted deck aircraft will land at an angle of 8 to 10 degrees from the center line, instead of down the center take-off line of the ship.

Planes can take off and land at the same time.

If a pilot should fail to engage the deck arresting gear—which has been newly designed for faster and heavier planes—he can pick up flying speed and take off for another try at an angle.

This lessens the danger of a landing plane hitting working people or parked planes on the forward section of the deck.

When construction began three years ago, the Forrestal was to have a flush deck and hinged stacks. That is, the control and operating island on the port side could be retracted and so would not project above the deck in action. The stacks could be laid down.

The purpose of this was to provide the greatest landing area.

Ship Redesign.
But when the Navy found early in 1953 that its experimental canted deck on the Antietam was a much-needed improvement, and that the control island and the stacks could be fixed with such a deck, the Forrestal was redesigned.

The canted deck permitted installation of four instead of two latest-type steam catapults for launching bombers.

A fixed island allows continuous visible operation of all controls, including latest navigation, radar and other detection gadgets.

Like other recent additions to the carrier fleet, the Forrestal will be unable to traverse the Panama Canal. Too wide—252 feet.

So if it is necessary to move any of them from one ocean to the other, they have to go "around the horn," the tip of South America.

One reason for congressional authorization of the five Forrestal-type carriers is to be able to keep some of that class in the Atlantic and some in the Pacific on permanent assignments.

EISENHOWER CALLS FOR ACTION ON ROADSModern System One of Our Great Needs, He Tells A.A.A.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—President Eisenhower today called on the American Automobile Association to "speak up again and again for prompt action on a highway system adequate for modern living."

Mr. Eisenhower, whose multi-billion-dollar highway improvement program was rejected by Congress earlier this year, made the suggestion in a message to the fifty-third annual convention of the A.A.A., an organization whose aim is to improve driving conditions. The group claims 4,800,000 members, mostly passenger car owners.

"The members of your association know from experience how urgently needed is a road system in pace with our expanding population," the President said. "Economic growth must not be stunted by a creeping paralysis of traffic."

"Motoring, convenience, safe driving and national security must not be checked by a lack of roads. A modern road system is one of our great national needs," he continued.

"I hope all of you will continue to speak up again and again for prompt action on a highway system adequate for modern living."

His brief message today included no specific details.

Mr. Eisenhower proposed to Congress last winter the construction of a vast network of interstate superhighways, to be financed by a special bond issue which would not be charged against the national debt. He also proposed a new federal corporation to issue the bonds.

But congressional Democrats—and some Republicans—opposed the financing proposals.

In the end, the Senate passed a Democratic plan that would have stepped up highway work under the federal-state system of sharing the cost—not under the President's plan. The House turned down both ideas after truckers and others opposed a schedule of tax increases proposed in the House to pay the added cost.

In a speech to the convention, Russell E. Singer of Washington, executive vice president of the A.A.A., said the rate of automobile fatalities was only about one-third of what it was 20 years ago.

He said the fatality rate in 1935 was 15.9 deaths for each million vehicles miles driven. Now, he said, the rate is running at about 5.7 deaths a million vehicle miles.

Singer said he was presenting these statistics to dispell the "alarmist view" that America "is rapidly committing suicide on wheels."

TWO FINED FOR RACING
SPORT CARS AT 95 M.P.H.

Two men were fined $25 each by Judge Webster Karrenbroeck in magistrate's court at St. Charles today for racing their Jaguar automobiles at speeds more than 95 miles an hour last Sept. 5, Labor day.

Walter Woodruff, 7356 Burrwood drive, N. M. and Gerald W. Lappin, 3218 Gary drive, Velda Village Hills, both pleaded guilty of speeding. They were arrested on U. S. Highway 67, at the junction of Route 94, in the northern section of St. Charles county.

Woodruff was driving a 1950 Jaguar and Lappin a 1951 model of the same automobile at the time of the arrest.

NIXON DEFENDS
ARTIST'S RIGHT TO CARICATURE HIM

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20 (AP)—Vice President Richard Nixon last night defended an artist whose caricature of him was removed from an art exhibit here.

In a telegram to Art Commission President Harold Zellerbach, who ordered the lithograph removed, Nixon said the artist had a right to express his opinion of a public official's behavior and the public was entitled to see it.

The caricature was painted by Stanford art instructor Victor

AMERICAN AIRLINES

America's Leading Airline

chooses Allison Turbo-Prop Power for 400-mile-an-hour luxury travel

New Lockheed Electras to give America the world's fastest, smoothest flights

AMERICAN AIRLINES has ordered Allison Turbo-Prop engines to power its new fleet of Lockheed Electra four-engine airliners to give America the world's finest air travel.

The Allison Turbo-Prop engine was chosen because it is the most advanced propeller-type aircraft engine available here or abroad—and the first Turbo-Prop to receive Civil Aeronautics Administration approval for commercial service.

The Lockheed Electra has been specially designed to take advantage of this new concept in aircraft power, and represents another major advancement in air transport.

These great new 64-passenger airliners will fly at speeds of more than 400 miles per hour—saving up to an hour on popular flights. They will operate from any airport now served—with much shorter take-offs and landings. And they will bring remarkable new standards of smoothness and comfort to air travel. These new luxury airliners are scheduled for delivery in 1958.

General Motors salutes American Airlines on this important step in continuing the advance of American aviation—and we are proud of our contribution to the progress of American-designed and American-built aircraft.

STATE MENTAL CHIEF A DEFENSE WITNESS

Called for Trial of Father Accused of Non-Support of Retarded Child.

B. E. Ragland, director of the State Division of Mental Diseases, will be called as one of the defense witnesses in the trial of Benjamin S. Russell of Herculaneum, Mo., charged with non-support of his mentally retarded son, it was announced yesterday.

J. Edward Gragg, Russell's court-appointed defense lawyer, requested Judge Louis Comerford of the Court of Criminal Correction, to issue subpoenas for Ragland and three other health officials "because I will try to show that my client made endeavors to turn the child over to an institution and he couldn't have gotten into an institution for a year or more," Gragg told the Post-Dispatch.

Ragland's division administers the two state institutions for the mentally retarded, one in St. Louis county and the other in Marshall.

Other officials who have been subpoenaed are Dr. Arthur A. Hines, superintendent of the St. Louis State Training School; Mrs. May Burford, supervisor of the Washington County Health Department unit at Potosi, Mo., and William Hannon, a child welfare worker at Crystal City, Mo.

The trial starts a week from today. Russell, who is free on bond, has said he left his 6-year-old son, Robert, in the 700 block of South Broadway Sept. 7 after becoming discouraged because he could not afford to give the boy special care and was unsuccessful in attempts to get help from county and state agencies.

PRESIDENT LANDS 7 TROUT BUT HAS CHICKEN DINNER

FRASER, Colo., Sept. 20 (AP)—President Eisenhower caught seven trout in 3½ hours of fishing yesterday but put them on ice and tried his hand at cooking fried chicken for dinner.

The President came here yesterday from the Denver White House to the Rocky Mountain ranch of an old friend, Aksel Nielsen. He fished from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., passing up lunch because his luck was good from the start.

But the President, who handles most of the cooking chores on a trip like this, decided on fried chicken for dinner. The trout was on today's menu.

The President's workshop is an all-electric kitchen in a comfortable prefabricated cottage which Nielsen put up this year. Staying with him there in addition to Nielsen is another old friend, George C. Allen of Washington, a former Truman Administration official.

BOY CONVICTED OF SEA HOAX THAT LED TO RESCUE SEARCH

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (AP)—George B. Teen, 16 years old, was convicted today in United States district court of having helped perpetrate a sea hoax that caused an extensive rescue search off New Jersey last summer.

Judge Mortimer W. Byers found the youth guilty of operating a radio transmitter without a license and of broadcasting a fake S O S. The trial began yesterday.

The court set Sept. 28 for sentencing of both Teen and Thomas J. Maldona, 21, who previously pleaded guilty to the same charges. Each faces a possible maximum sentence of one year imprisonment and a fine of $10,000 on each count.

Uninformed Citizenry.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20 (UP)—A private survey made at the City Council's request shows that about 70 per cent of the citizens do not know the name of their councilmen. Fifteen per cent do not know the Mayor's name.

TOKYO CABINET OK'S EXPANSIONS OF TWO U.S. BASES

TOKYO, Sept. 20 (AP)—Japan's cabinet today formally approved two of five planned United States Air Force base expansions which rioting villagers, farmers and labor unionists tried to stop earlier this month. Cabinet action is pending on the other three bases.

Takao Nishida, Labor Minister in the cabinet, said expansion of Tachikawa and Komaki air bases "is absolutely indispensable for the defense of this nation."

Cabinet approval clears the way for the Japanese Government to buy or expropriate the necessary land.

Japanese Government survey teams, protected by battalions of Japanese police, recently completed surveys of the two expansion areas despite thousands of demonstrators who locked arms and tried to prevent the teams entering the area.

More than 100 demonstrators and police were hurt in scuffling and fighting.

PRINCE SAYS CAMBODIA WILL QUIT FRENCH UNION

PARIS, Sept. 20 (AP)—Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk announced yesterday that he would take his Indochinese country out of the French Union.

The prince, former King of Cambodia whose party swept all 91 seats in the National Assembly elections earlier this month, said his country could remain in the French Union only if it was changed to resemble the British Commonwealth. The French retain control of foreign affairs, while British dominions handle their own foreign relations.

Sihanouk's communique said his party government will remove from the constitution any reference to the French Union "for the simple reason that Cambodia, being totally independent and sovereign, has not to mention the alliances which it can freely make or cancel."

To Head Investment Bankers.
CHICAGO, Sept. 2 (AP)—George W. Davis, a partner in Davis, Skaggs & Co., San Francisco, has been nominated for president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, the association announced yesterday. Nomination is tantamount to election.

POST OFFICE $362,700,000 IN RED, BELOW 1954 LOSS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Post Office Department said today it ended the 1955 fiscal year $362,700,000 in the red.

In its annual financial report, the department said this was an improvement of $29,200,000 over the previous fiscal year which ended with a postal deficit of $391,900,000.

It said it was able to make a better financial record in fiscal 1955 than in fiscal 1954 despite a pay increase to its workers, which added an estimated $40,300,000 to the cost of running the postal service last year.

Postal revenues totaled $2,349,500,000, up $38,400,000 from the preceding year. Expenses were $2,712,200,000, up $59,200,000, primarily because of the higher cost of handling heavier mail and because Congress gave postal workers the pay increase.

WORKER INJURED IN FALL

Herbert Russell, a construction worker living at 1209 Lami street, fell about 12 feet from a wall on which he was working at 8925 Riverview boulevard yesterday, suffering fractures of his back and both ankles. He is 55 years old.

Police said he was using an electric drill when he fell. He was taken to DePaul Hospital.

INDIA PROPOSES A WORLD AGENCY ON ATOM HAZARDS

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Sept. 20 (AP)—India yesterday called for immediate creation of an international organization to keep the world informed of any dangers to mankind from nuclear radiation, H-bomb or /-bomb tests.

The United States already has proposed that the U.N. General Assembly opening today consider the general subject of the effects of atomic radiation on human health and safety. Under the United States proposal the United Nations would co-ordinate all such information on the subject from various sources, including government reports.

India, whose spokesmen have urged an end to H-bomb and A-bomb tests, did not elaborate on the type of international organization to be set up. An international agency outside the United Nations could include non-member nations, among them Red China.

Japanese Engines for India.

Picketing opposite United Nations headquarters on opening day of the tenth General Assembly session, they demanded in handbills that the Assembly and the United States Govern-

REDS SHOW ATOM POWER PLANT TO FOREIGN NEWSMEN

MOSCOW, Sept. 20 (AP)—The Soviet Union today showed its atomic electric plant to 20 foreign newsmen. The Russians claim it is the first such reactor supplying industry.

The station is near the village of Obrenskoye, 60 miles southwest of Moscow. It is housed in a three-story building with a deeply-inset basement.

Nikolai Nikolayev, 42-year-old plant director, conducted the newsmen and showed a motion picture to illustrate how radioactive water is used by a heating element to provide power for steam turbines geared to generators.

Nikolayev said 30 grams of carbon (about an ounce) is used each day in the reactor to provide energy equal to 100 tons of coal.

The equipment used is apparently all Soviet made. One hundred employees work in the reactor unit. Twenty of these are women.

A traveling crane is used to take "hot" graphite rods from the reactor under the direction of an operator high above the floor in a radiation-proof control unit.

DR. R. E. TURNBULL BECOMES SHURTLEFF COLLEGE HEAD

The Rev. Dr. Roland E. Turnbull has submitted his resignation as pastor of First Baptist Church of Alton to accept the position of president of Shurtleff College, it was announced yesterday. He has served as acting president since Aug. 12.

He was head of the school's Bible and philosophy department from 1945 to 1948, when he resigned to devote full time to the church. He became pastor in 1947. He has been a member of Shurtleff's board of trustees since 1951, and chaplain at Monticello College since 1949.

The Rev. Dr. Turnbull, who asked that his resignation as pastor become effective in mid-November, came to the United States from Scotland in 1929. He received degrees from Aurora College, Loyola University and Northern Baptist Theological Seminary.

16-YEAR-OLD BOY ADMITS KILLING FOSTER PARENTS

EATON, O., Sept. 20 (AP)—A 16-year-old farm boy has admitted shooting his foster father to death and using his knife to choke to death his foster mother, Prosecutor Everett Fahrenholz said today.

Kenneth Bowman put their bodies into the family car, wrecked it in a ditch and set it afire to make the deaths look accidental, the prosecutor reported. He said Kenneth had signed a statement yesterday.

The bodies of Harold Bowman, 49, a farmer, and Maybelle Bowman, 46, of near West Alexandria, were found early Sunday morning, Sept. 4.

STREETCAR RIDER INJURED IN DISPUTE WITH OPERATOR

Ralph Porter, a laborer, 2832 Glasgow avenue, suffered a fractured right arm and contusions of the face last night in a clash with Delbert Russell, operator of a Grand boulevard streetcar, after Russell gave him 10 dimes change for $1, Porter told police.

He asserted that Russell hit him, and shoved him off the car at Grand and Washington boulevard. Russell, ordered to appear in police court with Porter, said the latter started an argument and struck at him, and he put Porter off the car.

CHEVROLET WINS

THE STOCK CAR "WORLD SERIES"!

Climaxing a brilliant season of stock car victories, Chevrolet walked away with the big one — the NASCAR* 500-mile race at Darlington, S. Carolina. Chevy outran everything from the "big cars" on down, to win both first and second — and seven out of the top ten places! More proof-in-action of qualities that mean safer driving for you!

What the world series is to baseball, the Darlington 500-mile is to stock car racing. It's the number one event of its kind. The toughest competitive test of cars and drivers.

And Chevrolet won this year's "500" hands down. Not only won, but swept the first two places, finishing ahead of a raft of high-priced, high-powered cars. The closest car in Chevrolet's field finished in fifth place! What's the answer? Simply that it takes more than raw horsepower to be a winner on the stock car tracks. It takes whiplash acceleration, superior cornering ability and handling ease, rock-solid stability — the same qualities that mean safer driving for you on the highway. And Chevrolet's got them like nobody else!

Doesn't that sound like a good reason for you to come in and drive a new Chevrolet right away? When you do, we'll show how easy we're making it to own the winner these days!

LONGEST VICTORY LIST OF ANY 1955 CAR!

You can see right here who's champ of the stock car tracks! In every one of these "big league" races Chevrolet was the winner — and the victory list is still growing!

BABY STOLEN FROM CALIFORNIA HOSPITAL

Kidnaper of 3-Day-Old Boy Believed to Be Blond Woman.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20 (AP)—The three-day-old son of Dr. and Mrs. Sanford Marcus was stolen from the nursery at Mount Zion Hospital yesterday. The child, Robert J. Marcus, is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Sanford Marcus of suburban Daly City.

He was taken from the glass-enclosed nursery yesterday afternoon, presumably by a woman who had been questioned earlier by Little Clement, a student nurse.

Eleanor Lorenz, a nursing supervisor, saw a blond, "untidy" woman walking from the hospital shortly afterward with a baby.

Calling in all off-duty police, Capt. John Engler ordered a house-by-house search of a 66-block area by 300 officers. Dr. Marcus, a staff physician at the hospital, was in the Air Force until a year ago. In a radio broadcast, addressed to the kidnaper he pleaded: "I realize that you probably wanted this baby for your own, to give it all the love and affection a fine new baby should have. But you must understand that you have left behind two heart-broken parents—a mother, who is on the verge of complete collapse and a father whose dreams of having a fine strong son are shattered.

"We will bear you no ill will for loving our son, too.

"Please, please return him in good health to us.

The doctor told reporters, "My wife and I are not vindictive. We will not prosecute if our baby is returned to us unharmed.

"And we are certainly poor candidates for ransom.

"The woman is just hungry for a child."

The Marcuses have two other children, Richard, 3, and Susan, 2.

THE WAY FAMOUS OYSTER HOUSES MAKE IT!

Campbell's frozen

OYSTER STEW

Freezing makes it possible—all the delicate, ocean-fresh flavor that never came through before!

You can count on your fingers (and have a couple left over) the places where you can get oyster stew that comes up to Campbell's.

Starting with choice Eastern oysters, fresh from their ocean beds, Campbell's chefs then add plenty of fresh whole milk, creamery butter and just the right touch of subtle seasonings.

The result is a rich and rare blend in which the delicate, fresh oyster flavor shines through in the most mouth-watering way.

That's oyster stew as Campbell's now brings it to you—thanks to freezing.

Just stop by your grocer's freezer and get the can that says Campbell's Frozen Oyster Stew.

Common Faults

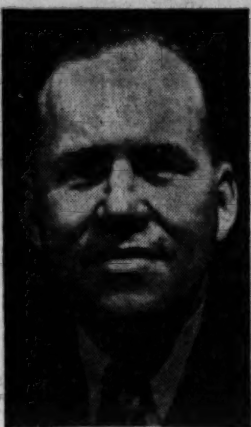

A Feminine Shortage Of Clothes Sense

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (AP).

THE average American husband may doubt whether his wife has horse sense—but he's sure she does have clothes sense.

The chances are he's got her wrong on both counts. She probably could beat both Swaps and Nashua on a quiz program, but when it comes to dressing—well, after all, race horses do insist on wearing shoes that fit them. Many women absolutely won't.

HAL BOYLE

Charles Le Maire, Hollywood fashion authority, says the four most common clothing faults among both housewives and career girls are these:

"They don't know how to wear furs. They don't know how to put on or take off gloves. They don't know how to handle veils. They won't pick the right size or kind of shoes." Le Maire, wardrobe head of the 20th Century-Fox film studio, speaks from experience. He has designed the costumes for 62 Broadway shows as well as the outfits worn by such glamorous stars as Susan Hayward, Jennifer Jones, Jane Russell and Marilyn Monroe.

He says that experienced actresses don't make these obvious clothing errors but that "if it's any consolation to the housewife, young starlets often do. They have to be taught."

WHAT'S WRONG with the way American women wear furs?

"Very few know how to handle a fur gracefully," said Le Maire. "They hold it awkwardly in their hand like a football halfback looking for someone they can throw a downfield pass to."

"They don't know how to drape it gracefully around their shoulders or drape it over their arm. It's the draping that creates the effect."

"They hang it around their neck like Daniel Boone fighting his way out of the forest. And many a woman thinks the more fur skins she wears the better she looks. Actually they only make her look like a fur trapper's bride."

"A small stole is graceful. A large stole is hard to handle. A woman would be better off with a fur coat."

NOW ABOUT those gloves?

"Too many women take off their gloves by tugging separately at each finger, as if they were plucking a goose. The removal of gloves shouldn't be a public struggle. The gloves should fit loosely enough so that they can be pushed on or off easily, not pulled off. Very few women have learned this art."

And the veil? Well, a woman with a veil can be downright pitiful.

"The most common mistake is they wear them too long," said Le Maire. "The big problem then is how a woman can eat, smoke or put on lipstick."

"She has to keep raising and lowering her veil as if it were the visor in a suit of armor. She should wear the veil short enough so that she can get at her face without all this trouble."

ON THE PROBLEM OF SHOES, Le Maire observed:

"Women want their feet to look small. But they go about this in the wrong way. They do it by buying shoes too small for their feet instead of picking shoes the right size which are designed to look smaller."

"They also do foolish things such as wearing dancing shoes for walking. I love open-toed, thin-strapped footwear in the evening, but not with a tailored suit. I like a lot of the foot to show in the evening, but almost all the foot covered in the daytime."

Le Maire gave this final tip:

"When it comes to dressing well, many wives don't know how to handle their husbands."

"The man of the house should have certain responsibilities about his wife's wardrobe. He should teach him not to bring her home expensive surprise gifts of either clothing or jewelry unless he is sure they are exactly the kind she wants."

"And her husband should be a partner in any expensive clothing ventures she makes herself. Husbands say they don't like to help pick out their wife's clothing, but that's only talk. They do like to."

Left Eyeglasses

By Christopher Billopp

JUST as visitors are departing in their automobile it may be discovered that they have left their eyeglasses behind them.

A shout will be set up to attract their attention. But it will do no good. People who leave their eyeglasses behind them do not hear. If the eyeglasses are waved at them they assume it is a friendly farewell and wave back.

The attitude may be taken that leaving the eyeglasses behind was the fault of their owners and that, therefore, it is the responsibility of the owners to return for them. Perhaps by being put to trouble they will learn not to leave their eyeglasses behind.

ON THE OTHER HAND, human kindness urges that the carelessness be overlooked since the owners of eyeglasses are helpless without them. It is bad too to have strange eyeglasses lying around the house and confusing them with one's own.

It is possible somebody may be going in the direction of the owners of the eyeglasses who can be engaged to deliver them. It is more likely that nobody is going in that direction so that the delivery cannot be turned over to a third party.

This will prove inconvenient. There may not be enough gas in the tank to get there and back without a visit to a filling station. A person may not be properly dressed for the trip and have to get into a change of clothes. Or there may be other important things waiting to be done.

ALL OF THIS INCONVENIENCE could have been avoided had the owners of the eyeglasses only taken the trouble to look around before they departed to make sure they were leaving nothing behind them.

But there is no use reflecting over what might have been. So, regardless of the trouble and inconvenience, the eyeglasses will be delivered.

What a poor return for the effort when the owners remark that there was no need for all the worry since they have another pair.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

"I AM a widower in the mid-forties and have a 10-year-old daughter. Recently, I have been seeing a good deal of a woman who I should say is in her late thirties. I would like to know what would be the proper name to teach my daughter to call her. To have the child call her Jane sounds disrespectful, and on the other hand, 'Miss Jones' sounds very stiff. What do you think of 'Miss Jane'? Would this be suitable?"

"Aunt Jane" is most usual and would be best.

Some Sugar Cookies to Delight Taste

By Edith M. Barber

A GOOD sugar cookie! Several readers have asked for a recipe for what sounds like a very easy and simple question to answer. I am not so sure about this as not all cookies honored by this name have been worthy of it.

While I was in Michigan this summer two of my friends supplied not only a generous number of sugar cookies but also, at my request, later provided the recipes. Of course, I asked if I might pass them on to you.

THE RECIPES have a number of things in common as you will note. One calls for sour cream and the other for sour milk or buttermilk. In one recipe two eggs are used and in the other there are three eggs and, as you will see, less liquid.

Soda is used as the leavening but there is also baking powder, although but a small amount, in addition to the soda, among the ingredients for the other recipe. The cookies are equally tender and rather soft. Raisins were used as a garnish for the Fulton cookies. New York State supplies this family recipe.

The other originated in Michigan where both were baked especially for me this summer. It is wonderful to have good friends who are also good cooks.

NEW YORK STATE SUGAR COOKIES. (Allen-Harbert)

Two cups sugar; one cup shortening; two eggs; one and one-half cups sour milk; three and one-half cups flour; one teaspoon soda; one teaspoon baking powder; salt; vanilla. Mix as for cake. Drop by teaspoonful on baking sheet. Sprinkle with sugar. Put a raisin in the center. NOTE: I sometimes take half the batter—add two squares melted chocolate, one-half cup nut meats and have a very acceptable chocolate cookie.

MICHIGAN SUGAR COOKIES. (Griswold)

Two cups sugar; one cup shortening; three eggs beaten; one cup sour cream; one teaspoon soda; four cups all-purpose flour; one teaspoon vanilla. Follow method for New York State sugar cookies. Yield: three dozen cookies.

NEW MILLINERY TREND

The heavy hat, either shaped as a cap or as a beret, is typical of a new trend in millinery. Starting in Paris, this full-bodied hat is very new in appearance and gives an entirely different look to the entire ensemble. Bulky materials such as fur or fur fabrics are especially suitable to emphasize this idea.

Serve macaroni and cheese with crisply cooked bacon and broiled tomatoes for a good lunch or supper.

Let's Explore Your Mind

1. APPEARANCE IS THE CHIEF ATTRACTION IN ROMANTIC LOVE. TRUE ☐ FALSE ☐ 9-20

Answer to Question 1. APPEARANCE counts for a great deal, but beauty is seldom a good criterion. A dumping of a girl with pug nose and freckles may arouse deep devotion, while a statuesque "doll" with the waist of a string bean and ravishing complexion may be passed by. Homely men are seldom bachelors, and a bald head is no impediment to a lover. Looking around at husbands and wives, we realize that Schopenhauer was in error when he maintained that nature brought about perfect matings to produce beautiful offspring.

Only in limited doses. It helps to talk over troubles with someone; but if you go on talking, you are likely to develop the habit of leaning on your arm.

Answer to Question 2. It helps to talk over troubles with someone; but if you go on talking, you are likely to develop the habit of leaning on your arm.

Answer to Question 3. Act as though you do not have it—like "Teddy" Roosevelt did. He had a weak body and thought that he lacked courage and was unattractive. So he rode, swam, worked with a vengeance, and became a model of endurance and personal magnetism. He met fearful situations in the spirit of adventure. He overcame physical weakness by acting as though he were strong and overcame his fear by acting unafraid. A splendid example.

Two Girls With Date Problems

By Elinor Williams

IT seems that two high school girls have problems—and guess what they are? Boys! Maybe you know some boys just like this and you're puzzled, too. So let's try to find the answers. They write:

"We are two girls with problems we'd like to answer. (1) Why is it that when a boy calls you for a date and you have to baby sit or something, he never calls you again? (2) Why is it that a boy takes a girl out, then a few days afterward, he doesn't speak to her or ever go near her again? (3) What should you do when you don't want to go out with a boy and refuse, then another boy calls, and you want to date him—miss the date when you know he'll never call again if you refuse?"

"Answer—(1) It's a mystery why one 'No' apparently discourages a boy for life! You can often avoid this by suggesting another definite date like this: '... I'd love to; could we make it Friday instead?'"

(2) Boys usually ignore a girl after a date when they're just beginning to date and are 'experimenting' to find out what type of girl they like best. But even if their interest flits quickly to another girl, it's rude, crude and childish to omit speaking after a date. When boys grow a little older and more mature, they learn to show the courtesy of speaking and being friendly after a date, even if they have a new heart-throb. It's more grownup."

(3) Some girls avoid this situation by telling the boy they don't like that they're sorry, but they already have plans for that evening. Then if another boy calls, they can accept and no feelings are hurt, even if the first boy sees them while they're out. If no other date comes up, you can spend the evening with a girl friend or relative to keep your word about having 'plans.'

Coming TV Series A Big Project

By William Ewald

HENRY SALOMON

Age, "Three Two One Zero," "The Rise and Fall of a Dictator" and "Austria," will appear at regular intervals thereafter.

"NIGHTMARE IN RED" was a son of a gun," said Salomon. "We got film for it from 76 different sources—libraries, foreign governments and private collectors."

"We got a lot of our film from Communist agents working in Paris. Even they will do anything for a buck."

Salomon, who keeps a tight hand over his productions, read scores of books on Russia and Communism to prepare for the script. All told, he spent three and a half months in Europe last fall digging up material and film clips that could be used in the study.

"NIGHTMARE IN RED" called for a lot of hard work, but "The Jazz Age" was "a lot of fun," Salomon said. "It's the story of the 1920s, the flapper, prohibition, bathtub gin and the Wall Street boom and bust. Fred Allen will do the narration."

"Three Two One Zero," a study of the effects of atomic energy, will be a repeat show—it was done on NBC only a few months ago.

"I'm leaving for Austria the end of this month," said Salomon, "to get the Austrian show started. The other program, 'The Rise and Fall of a Dictator,' will deal with Adolf Hitler."

ALTHOUGH SOME HAVE CALLED Salomon's filmed shows "documentaries," he shuns the word himself.

"I think of myself as a playwright," Salomon said. "I'm fundamentally a dramatist working with history. I like the idea of presenting history dramatically. After all, there's no difference between good education and good entertainment."

Although the 38-year-old Salomon likes to think of himself as a playwright, he kind of leans to the opinion that the legitimate theater is at a point now where it has to take a back seat to TV.

"I'm a great believer in the artist using the tools of his time," he said. "The impact, the audience you can reach with TV, is tremendous. And I can't see any reason for writing down to the audience."

BECAUSE OF THIS BELIEF, Salomon confessed that dreaming up TV projects is one of his pet pursuits.

"I'd like to re-edit Walt Whitman's 'Leaves of Grass' and put it in dramatic form," said Salomon, "then use the words as a backdrop for a study of mid-century America. I'd also like to do a study of World War I for television."

"But if you want me to go really fantastic, how about this for TV—a one and one-half hour study of the whole cosmos, a treatment of time, space and relativity? It may sound pretty high-flown for TV, but I think we're reaching a point where even the most fantastic subjects soon will be possible."

Needed: 2 Parents

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

CHILDREN need two parents at every age, but the father's role will change more rapidly and completely than does that of the mother, especially in his relation to a son. The little girl has a simpler problem in imitating her mother. From the earliest years she sees how a woman behaves in the home and how she does at least that part of the work of the world that is done in the home. A daughter can follow suit. Too often a boy gets little more than these same feminine patterns. He needs a father, but Mr. Q. is not just sure what he needs from a father.

DR. PAUL POPENOE

"My son is only six months old, so it will be some time before he can play baseball with me," he writes. "I'm not very clear as to just what I can do for him, in fact. Give me a few suggestions."

AT PRESENT, the most important thing you can do for him is to take good care of his mother, Mr. Q. Of course, she has the main responsibility during the child's infancy. But the demonstrations you will give of love and protection for her are more important to a child than you may realize.

A few years later, your son will profit by seeing how a man behaves around the house and learning from you whatever you may bring home from the outside world. Don't push him too rapidly. Most of us fathers, especially with the first boy, are too anxious to watch his progress, and we try to force it. We gain nothing by doing so but may interfere with his normal development.

ONE OF THE MOST USEFUL THINGS you can do for a boy, or a girl either, is to take him or her on an excursion outside the home. Make it a simple one. Instead of a round of sight-seeing, take them to one place, let them look it over at leisure and remember it. That applies equally to vacation trips while the children are small. Don't go in for too much athletics with your boy. Let him compete with those of his own age.

ON THE WHOLE, the most important thing a father can do for young children is simply to be around where they are. The girls need to know what men are like just as much as the boys do. Many a small boy makes trouble for his mother, his teacher or his friends simply because he has no idea of how a boy is supposed to behave. He doesn't want to be a sissy.

In order to avoid this and be distinctive, he may be overaggressive and go in for roughhousing and destruction, or he may on the other hand, retreat into timidity. If he has a good picture of masculine behavior, he can adopt it to the advantage of all concerned. Give him and the home all the time you can.

Nat Gavender of St. Louis Travels Far and Wide to Find Fast-Sellers for Nation's Stores

NAT GAVENDER TALKS OVER NEW MERCHANDISING ITEMS WITH MRS. MARY SPENCER, HIS RIGHT-HAND ASSISTANT. . . SUCCESS IS A MATTER OF "SENSING IT."

By John Keasler

THE whole world of selling, the vast realm of merchandising, with its thin and nervous line that separates the black ink from the red, depends solely on that most elusive and enigmatic critter, the all-powerful shopper; the consumer with the cash in his pocket.

Mrs. Jones wanders into the department store with her charge-plate at the reluctant ready and empties hang in the balance. In the United States marketplace no practice, with the possible exception of breathing, is so widespread among retailers as the everlasting attempt to figure out what she might buy—and have it ready for sale when it's wanted.

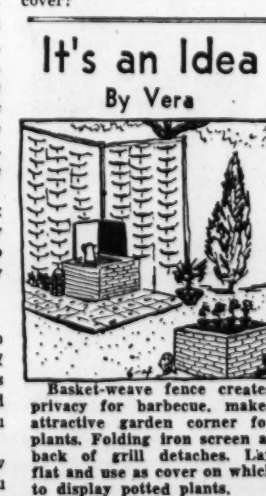

Here in St. Louis is home-base for a fast-moving, instinct-laden man who hurries through life dedicated to an existence which sometimes appears to be a cross between the hunches of a roulette player and the meticulous factuality of a mathematician. He is Nat Gavender, the hot-item man, and his job is figuring out what people will buy.

A large part of Gavender's far-flung business differs in no great degree from that of some other buying firms; what makes this concern different is his enthusiastic—and successful—chase after the potential seller, the sleeper, the item which will make the public shell out happily; will make the store executive beam as multiple-gross lots disappear to the inspiring carillon of cash registers pealing out good cheer.

It is this ability to find and recognize the fast-selling item, and his swiftness in flashing word to his clients, on which Gavender, once a $3 a week errand boy, built a big business.

HE personally travels at least 100,000 miles per year in the search. Last year he covered 110,000 miles. His annual telephone bill well exceeds $30,000. He has offices in five cities, plus innumerable contacts in buying and retailing circles; when it comes to department stores of the country, just about everybody knows Gavender.

Take Fort Myers, Fla. When a retired Chicagoan whomped up a plastic orange crate cover, to sell for $1, Gavender got the word. To him, it looked like a hot item. Department store buyers were inclined to laugh—what good is an orange crate cover?

Well, he said, you cover orange crates with them; produce an attractive night stand, radio table, lots of things. Some of the stores he advises went along, softly—before long an astounded executive of one store, which had sold about 15,000, regretted his promise to eat an orange crate cover if they sold in any volume at all.

Such things as being aware that an unsuspected desire to cover orange crates existed in the buying public is, first, a matter of "sensing" it—and even Gavender can't explain this in so many words. Of course, his 40 years in retailing does help. You sense it, store-test it, flash the word. If you're right, you build a reputation—if you're wrong, you fall by the wayside.

Gavender has been right enough to garner some 150 accounts for his "ITEMizer" advisory service, while establishing offices in St. Louis, Chicago, Los Angeles, Dallas and Miami.

In addition to resident buying services, he acts as merchandising consultant—but it is the chase for the hot item that furnishes him the most fascination. In this, he finds romance, finds adventure and satisfaction, much the same feeling a uranium prospector must feel when his Geiger counter gets noisy.

(A current item he's checking out is a Geiger counter to retail for only $8.49—it looks like a comer.)

GAVENDER, who with his wife and son, Stanley, lives at 4605 Lindell boulevard, opened his first office of Nat Gavender, Inc., here in St. Louis 17 years ago after leaving a good merchandising job with a large department store; he had an idea. He also had a briefcase. That was his inventory.

The briefcase wasn't the big, partitioned affair he carries all over the country now. He said he couldn't afford one like that back then. But the idea remains roughly the same as it was: That retailing has a tendency to get in a rut with the same old suppliers putting out the same old merchandise and that swift-selling items are often to be found in off-the-beaten-path areas—if somebody would just find them.

Gavender found them. Any new business, of an off-the-beaten-path nature, comes up against some skepticism. But the little business grew and grew and Gavender is still finding them.

IF the domestic hot water for your home comes from a tankless coil in your boiler, you may have experienced a situation known as "running out of hot water." This usually occurs when one is taking a hot shower, looking forward to a nice hot soaking in a tub or washing a lot of dishes. It can be most upsetting and has been the cause of a lot of frantic calls to the plumber.

A tankless coil is supposed to deliver a certain amount of hot water at a certain temperature. The amount depends on the size of the boiler and the coil but in many homes it is around three gallons a minute. Now, when you use more than three gallons of hot water a minute, the water running through the coil doesn't have a chance to get really hot. It may not even get lukewarm.

The simplest cure is just not to use the water at such a fast rate and this can be done by not opening the hot water faucet all the way open. This is too easy for most people and so another suggestion is to have a small valve installed on the hot water pipes which will limit the flow of hot water to the amount that can be adequately heated by the coil.

In some homes there is a constant demand for a lot more hot water than the boiler can produce and the answer here is a storage tank—a horizontal one—above the boiler where hot water can be stored until it is required. An installation of this type is not expensive for it requires only a metal tank and the necessary pipes and fittings.

If you did not have your oil storage tank filled at the beginning of summer it's a wise idea to have your fuel company pump out the sludge from the tank before it is filled again. The sludge in the bottom not only can clog up the burner but can also rust out the bottom of the tank. Many fuel oil concerns will do this job gratis, or for only a small charge.

ing those items—his name has become solid in retailing circles: one definition of him has waxed poetically as the merchandiser who discovered America. (Oddly enough, this area was found to extend far beyond the limits of New York.) He checks nationwide to discover what's selling where.

THIS energetic, heavy-set, nattily dressed man, who can speak with contagious enthusiasm, still hasn't gotten away from his office-in-hat method of operation.

He may not show up at his St. Louis office for a period of weeks; he will cover several cities in a 48-hour period. He keeps in touch by telephone with each of his five offices, but he ranges all over, from Maine to San Diego and caty-cornered from Washington to Miami. He's an incurable telephone bug; routs store executives out mercilessly in the middle of the night to tell them of discoveries.

The mental picture of an executive being awakened to hear news of a flea-killing collar for dogs (ointment is beneath the collar) is quite interesting. But when a Gavender discovery, like that one, sells like $15 pagoda parakeet cages, the executive doesn't mind.

The cages, tested in Los Angeles, went like unpalmed rowboats, which went just fine. How does he find them?

By many methods. His own employees, of course, keep their eyes open. But in every city, Gavender checks newspaper advertising closely. And word comes in from his thousands of acquaintances in department store and specialty shop retailing. Knowing a comer is the trick; this entails, in addition to keeping a close check on buying habits and trying to anticipate them, a certain intangible feel, the ability to spot what folks will buy.

The "hot" items aren't all novelty stuff, or all low-priced merchandise—far from it. While Gavender was the man who passed out the word that Mexican burros were selling quite well on the west coast, he also was the man who spotted $1000 organs as a potential hot item—one store in Oregon sold 92.

On the other hand, it was at his insistence that classical records were priced at 99 cents; they swept the market despite some buyers' objection that the "99 cent taste" didn't want classical music. Gavender thought this as illogical as saying that people wouldn't want Cadillacs at Ford prices. Anyhow, income doesn't dictate taste universally. One story around the Gavender office is about the mink-clad dowager of haughty mien who swept into a store to inquire about a (Gavender-advised) item.

"Wheeh," she asked aloofly, "may I find those ebony ceramic panthers of such graceful lines?"

"Hey," broke in a less affluent shopper, to the salesgirl, "where's them black cats?"

The general manager of the firm, Mrs. Mary Spencer, of 221 North Elizabeth avenue, Ferguson, is caught up in the whirlwind of the firm's enterprises; evidently loves every minute of it, although she departed a buyer's job 10 years ago with a local department store "to avoid traveling so much."

Now she travels about 50,000 miles per year—sees the boss only in passing. She noted that, even as late as 1949-50, when she was teaching retail buying at Washington University, there was no textbook available which even mentioned item merchandising, although now it is conceded to be one of the most powerful tools in the retail business.

This thing—the item—has to have appeal. The item itself is likely to be literally anything: a $3.98 air mattress, a $2.98 pack of reducing chewing gum, a do-it-yourself bird house, a $99.25 snow-moving machine. Who would have thought so many women would like to have rowing machines to waltz away in their boudoir?

"That store is taking 50," Mrs. Spencer said, after a telephone call. "They're going to put them in the cosmetic department with a girl to demonstrate them."

Gavender said that was nice. The twice-a-week "ITEMizer" bulletin is printed in the St. Louis office, on the ninth floor at 915 Olive street, and stamped confidential; shot out to stores who subscribe to the service, on a retainer basis.

And Gavender stays busy finding more and more items, keeping close track of store testing sales; right now something called a bubbler, which attaches to an outdoor faucet and makes a drinking fountain for the kids, is passing all the tests—it's a hot item.

IT'S got that magic, Gavender feels. Why? Why would lots of folks want bubblers?

Why did they want burros? Where did all those orange crates come from? How come the run on $1000 organs? Why did I buy a pipe wrench for 88 cents in the drug store the other night? I don't need a pipe wrench. But there it was—that 88-cent pipe wrench, right there in Gavender's bulletin. He saw it a year ago.

On his desk was a skillet imported from Germany, something called "angel chimers" from Japan and a pair of the oddest looking bedroom slippers you ever saw. These are pretty good items, we were assured—at which point Gavender had to go catch a plane. When you're dealing in merchandising—spotting trends and finding what's selling fast where—you have to stay up with the times, and he had already sat still an entire hour.

West opened the club six, East put up the king, and South won. Now, naturally going out for the establishment of the long diamond suit, South led his own jack. West won and returned the club jack. South played low, perhaps hoping for a continuation up to his queen-nine, but West was not that naïve—he shifted to his top heart.

South played low from dummy—and he suddenly found that instead of having everything nicely under control, he was actually in a predicament, having taken his heart king, shifted back to clubs, and thereby set up West's suit for him while West still had control of the vital diamond suit.

South did too much ducking in this deal. His concession of the club jack to West was sound, but the same cannot be said for his technique in the heart suit. On West's play of the heart nine, South should have called for dummy's ace with firmness and dispatch. It was simply a matter of counting potential tricks and sure suit stoppers. South did not need two heart tricks, as such; yet he would still have a heart stopper after playing dummy's ace. Then, while keeping clubs and hearts under control, he could easily knock out the opponents' second diamond stopper. The enemy would win two diamond tricks, the club West had home, and the heart king, but the rest would certainly go to North-South.

My Day

The Task Of Teaching About U.N.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

BANGKOK. In the Education Committee of the World Federation of United Nations Associations meeting here the subject was the role of the federation in adult education. There were two reports prepared and both were very interesting.

Sweden and Indonesia were widely chosen for studying this subject. One spoke as a highly developed country and one as a country fighting illiteracy and needing help not only to teach about the United Nations but to help the adult population to read and write.

As each representative of a country spoke it was easy to see where the difficulty of acquainting people with the United Nations was complicated by the problem of illiteracy. They voiced their desire for books that could be read by those with little skill in reading, but yet could not be interested in children's books. They were speaking for mature people shut out from the world of ideas.

ALL THE EFFORTS that are being made in various countries to tell people about the United Nations and the specialized age we live in are far more extensive than I thought.

Thailand, for instance, told of a center set up here to promote fundamental education by UNESCO. Teachers are being trained to go out and weave a knowledge of the United Nations and its purposes into their everyday teaching.

As a government, Thailand is much opposed to Communism, and there has been some controversy as to whether the people, many of whom may never have heard about Communism, shall be taught about it. The consensus at present is that they must have it explained on the theory that to be forewarned is to be forearmed. Time alone will tell more.

But there is a big Chinese population here and they are very near to China. Besides, this is an old nation and mature, and I think they are probably wise to trust to the wisdom and understanding of the people.

ONE OF THE delegates from The Netherlands gave me a speech written by Queen Juliana and delivered at the University of Leyden to The Netherlands Youth Community and The Netherlands Students Council.

It is a very interesting speech in which the Queen points out that people can no longer live successfully divided from each other; nor can there be the have and the have-nots in a peaceful world. She is trying to arouse the conscience of the youth of her land and to appeal to their idealism. Through them she hopes, I am sure, to reach the older people as well.

Martha Carr's OPINION—

Dear Martha:

I HAVE been going with a girl for seven months. We both are in our late 20s. In all respects we seem suited to each other, except that she gets angry over little things and is argumentative. She says she inherited her temper from her father. We have broken up and made up several times. A month ago, however, I told her that marriage was out of the question if this spirit of quarreling continues. Since then she seems to be trying hard to maintain an even disposition. Do you think she can overcome this? Can we forget all the unpleasant arguments we have had and build a sure foundation to a happy marriage? Or is this to be expected of all girls?
WORRIED.

Not at all. You'll find as many different dispositions among the girls as among the boys—and don't think for a minute that the female of the species is the only one to get mad and argumentative. From what you say, it appears to be a well-grounded fault, although I don't think she should blame her father's quick temper for her own. I think it's possible for a normal person to overcome any fault if he tries hard enough and you're smart to insist that she do so before you marry. With the difficulties that are bound to come up in establishing a home together, she'll have plenty of temptation to fly off the handle, unless she has learned to control it. Incidentally, you can help by watching your own words and actions and making sure you don't provoke an argument from her.

Dear Martha:

I AM 18 YEARS OLD. I fell in love with a boy, 22, about a year ago. He was in the service then. We wrote regularly, then he came home on his first furlough and got mad just over nothing. Now he is home for good. He comes to my house quite often and acts as though he cares for me. Then he won't come again for a few days. When he's gone I don't care if I live or die. Everyone tells me to forget him but that's not easy when you're in love.
HEARTSICK.

Of course it isn't easy, but you can't waste your life moaning over a boy who apparently isn't really in love and certainly isn't ready to settle down. You don't have to forget him, but you ought to be dating other fellows when he isn't around instead of going into a decline the moment he walks out the door. Incidentally, he might come around more often if he thought he had competition. It's worth trying.

IN ANSWER TO Mrs. R.: Housewarmings are usually given as a surprise to the family moving into a new house. If the host and hostess want their friends to see their new home, they can entertain at an open house. To invite friends to a housewarming for themselves is just like asking for gifts.

The Pretty Picture

By Ruth Millett

DURING the past 20 years wives have been told over and over again how important it is to be "nice to come home to."

The typical picture held up to wives is of a woman in a clean and pretty dress her hair neatly brushed, her lipstick fresh and glowing, greeting her husband with a toothpaste-ad smile, and waiting breathlessly to hear all the details of "his day."

Well, that's a pretty picture, all right, and there must be thousands of women over the country creating the same pleasant little scene day after day, and then wondering helplessly why their homecoming husbands don't seem to notice the picture. Or why they are so reluctant to sit right down and start telling the pretty picture of a wife all about the day's problems and triumphs.

WELL, HONESTLY NOW, what man wants to come home to the same pretty little picture day after day? Once the honeymoon is over the picture is bound to grow dull. "How much more interesting it must be to any man not to know exactly how he is going to find his wife when he comes home from work."

One evening she may be rushing around happily getting dinner in a hurry because she has had the most wonderful afternoon, and as she hurries about she is as eager as a child to share her day's experiences.

THE NEXT DAY she may be in jeans, working in the garden or putting the finishing touches on the room she has spent the day painting.

Another evening may find her stitching up a new dress. Or all dressed up and in a "Let's have dinner out tonight" mood.

A wife like that isn't spending her time creating pretty pictures. She's living her own life and having fun and her husband is glad to see her as he finds her.

Beauty After 40

By Edyth Thornton McLeod

I HAVE two outfits, one a navy and white print and the other a navy with white and green designs. I have a navy faille coat which looks nice with both dresses. I need new accessories. What colors should I have?—Donna.

I suggest that you get navy blue shoes with a navy bag, hat and gloves. Also a set of white accessories except the shoes. A pair of green gloves and some green costume jewelry would be smart.

IS IT NECESSARY to wear dark glasses? I plan to spend two months near the ocean. I am 49 and I wear eye-glasses.—Hilda.

Dark glasses should be fitted to you by prescription so that there can be no question of their suitability. Dark glasses are very restful when you are in the sun for any length of time.

I have a sagging chinline and cords in my neck show terribly. Could I do anything to help these conditions?—Jane S.

Certainly. Start on my neck care plan at once. You may obtain a copy of my free leaflet, "How to Youthify Your Neck." Just send me, care of this newspaper, a long, self-addressed, 3-cent stamped envelope with your request.

She's on the Threshold of Broadway

Former St. Louis Salesgirl Comes Back as Ingenue in New Play

By Mary Kimbrough

A FORMER St. Louis model and salesgirl, standing on the threshold of her Broadway debut and back home for a week's road try-out of her first big play, "still can't believe it's happening" to her.

The slim, young actress, Jacqueline Scott—remembered in St. Louis as "Jackie"—doesn't talk glibly about her stage career. It's all pretty new to her, even though she has been in New York for the past four years, haunting casting offices, playing bits on television and in stock and hoping for her big chance. The chance came this year and now you can catch a note of happy skepticism in her soft voice as she speaks of her good fortune in landing an important ingenue role in "The Wooden Dish," starring another ex-St. Louisan, Louis Calhern. The play, scheduled to open on Broadway Oct. 6, is playing this week at the American Theater.

"I was sent to read for it by someone who had seen me in a Hunter College play," she said. "Mr. Calhern interviewed me, had me read twice for the role and that was all there was to it. But it's still hard to believe."

Admittedly unused to being interviewed, and a little reluctant to talk about herself, the brown-eyed actress didn't bring up what her press agent had released about her—that she won the role from 211 other candidates and that Moss Hart, the playwright, was one of those who had been impressed with her work at Hunter, and had encouraged her to go on with her dramatic work.

A role on Broadway has been Jacqueline's dream since she left St. Louis for New York but her ambition to act was born much earlier than that. As a child growing up in her na-

JACQUELINE SCOTT HEADS FOR BROADWAY AGAIN FROM ST. LOUIS... THIS TIME WITH MUCH BRIGHTER PROSPECTS AS SHE TRAVELS WITH THE NEW PLAY, "THE WOODEN DISH."

Scott, still lives in Sikeston, Mo., and later in Neosho, she took tap dancing lessons and the first time she appeared before an audience at the age of 3 she was sold on the idea. At 7, she announced her decision to the family and from then on, through grade school and high school and in her appearances with the St. Louis Community Playhouse, she didn't lose the dream. Her mother, Mrs. Maxine

"But I knew it had to be New York if I wanted to do anything on stage," she said, "so a friend drove me there. I was so scared that I was sick all the way. When we got to New York, my friend had to go on somewhere else, so she dropped me at a hotel, gave me a map with an X on it to show where I was—and drove away."

THE next morning, armed with her map, she started out, and it wasn't long before she had a job as a page at Radio City. Then she enrolled in the American Theater Wing, started looking up everyone who might introduce her to show people, and gradually picked up small roles in off-Broadway shows, stock and on television.

At Hunter College, she took mostly academic subjects, but participated in as many dramatic productions as possible. While she was maintaining a full college schedule, she worked as a stand-in on the television shows, "Beat the Clock," "Make the Connection" and "Two for the Money."

"They have to rehearse the questions and stunts before the contestants get up there, and make sure they aren't too hard and that the directions can be understood. I'm sure on Herb Shriner's show, 'Two for the Money,' they thought I didn't know anything. I tried to say that China was smaller than the state of Texas. Dr. Gross, who thinks up the questions, almost fell off his chair."

"On 'Beat the Clock,' we had to try out all the crazy, wild stunts that the contestants would have to do later. They wanted to make sure the average contestant could perform the stunt in a given number of seconds."

"It's one way to pick up a little extra money between acting jobs—if you don't mind having to slam a custard-pie in your best friend's face."

The Little Woman Pickling, but Not Like in the Old Days

By Clarissa Start

PICKLING is in vogue these days. We make this statement as the result of a small sampling survey, both of pickles and picklers.

Several of our friends who heretofore had never pickled anything but themselves have taken it up. It must be a trend.

Our pickling experience came about because a male co-worker made some chili sauce. He'd never made chili sauce before; it just seemed like a good idea. It turned out so well that he brought us a sample jar.

"Thank you," we said. "I'll give you a jar of my watermelon pickle."

IN BOOKS about old time country cooks they always use expressions like "my watermelon pickle." Truth of the matter is, we'd never pickled a watermelon or any part thereof. But we'd visited a home in Marissa, Ill., a few weeks before and eaten some delicious watermelon pickle. It couldn't be too difficult, especially for a veteran at home canning. We've made a lot of things. Canned peaches. Jelly out of canned blueberries. Strawberry preserves, two ways, runny and gummy.

Anyway, we got out that volume written by the modern girl's best friend next to her mother, her lawyer, and her stockbroker. We refer, of course, to Irma Rombauer.

As experts like Mrs. Rombauer know, American women plunge through recipes, then read to see what they've left out. After we'd soaked the rinds and were about to pickle them, we found they should have been peeled. The night before. So our first "batch"—three pints—wasn't too successful. The next week, despite a temperature drop, the family had watermelon for dessert and this time our efforts turned out satisfactory enough to be claimed as "my watermelon pickle."

MEANWHILE WE HAD fallen prey to an old weakness, recipe browsing. While waiting for the watermelon rind to pickle, we couldn't resist turning the pages. Bread and butter pickles, hm, sounded good. Senfgurken—these fat, firm slices are delicious. Quicker than you could say tumeric and cloves, our kitchen looked like harvest season.

Do you know it takes a heap of peeled yellow cucumbers to make a pint of senfgurken? And that the more spices you buy the more are left over which can only be used by buying more cucumbers? But perhaps we take pickling too seriously. A bachelor girl apartment dweller amazed us by mentioning casually that she'd made pickled onions one evening.

"But the recipe begins, 'Soak in brine for five weeks,'" we protested.

"Oh, that," she dismissed the recipe. "It sounded too complicated so I just soaked the onions in salt. It said not to use iodized but that was the only kind I had. And then it said white vinegar but I used spiced vinegar and added some cider vinegar in case it didn't have enough oomph. And I threw in some garlic and sugar; that was my own idea. And, of course, I didn't have any jars so I put them in a plastic container in the refrigerator."

"How were they?" we asked weakly.

"We tried them in martinis," she said. "Delicious."

Fashion From Skin Out

MOLDING your supple, slender silhouette costumes for fall means the proper fit in a foundation—this year good fashion starts from the skin out.

Take a look at the fashion picture for the coming season. Everything has been slimmed down, whether lines are molded to the body in torso, tunic, or Dior's "Y" shape. Designers from the Italian couture group prefer the modified Empire, molding the waistline above slim skirts.

A long-line strapless bra that holds the diaphragm seems to take two inches off most figures. For you who want extra tummy control for hip-hugging fashions, there are garments with hidden "finger" panels to flatten the abdomen and a non-roll top to subtract from the waist.

The trick of a beautiful figure lies in control that trims by invisible methods. Models and designers know the importance of the proper foundation garments that holds curves without showing how or why. They always say, "To be among the best-dressed, you must also be among the best 'under-dressed.'"

THE NARROW LINE FOR FALL

Obviously, no smart woman can afford to be careless in the selection of the proper foundation.

Why settle for less when Mountain-Grown Folger's gives you MORE FLAVOR PER CUP

Folger's skillful blending and roasting of nature's most flavorful coffees makes the difference!

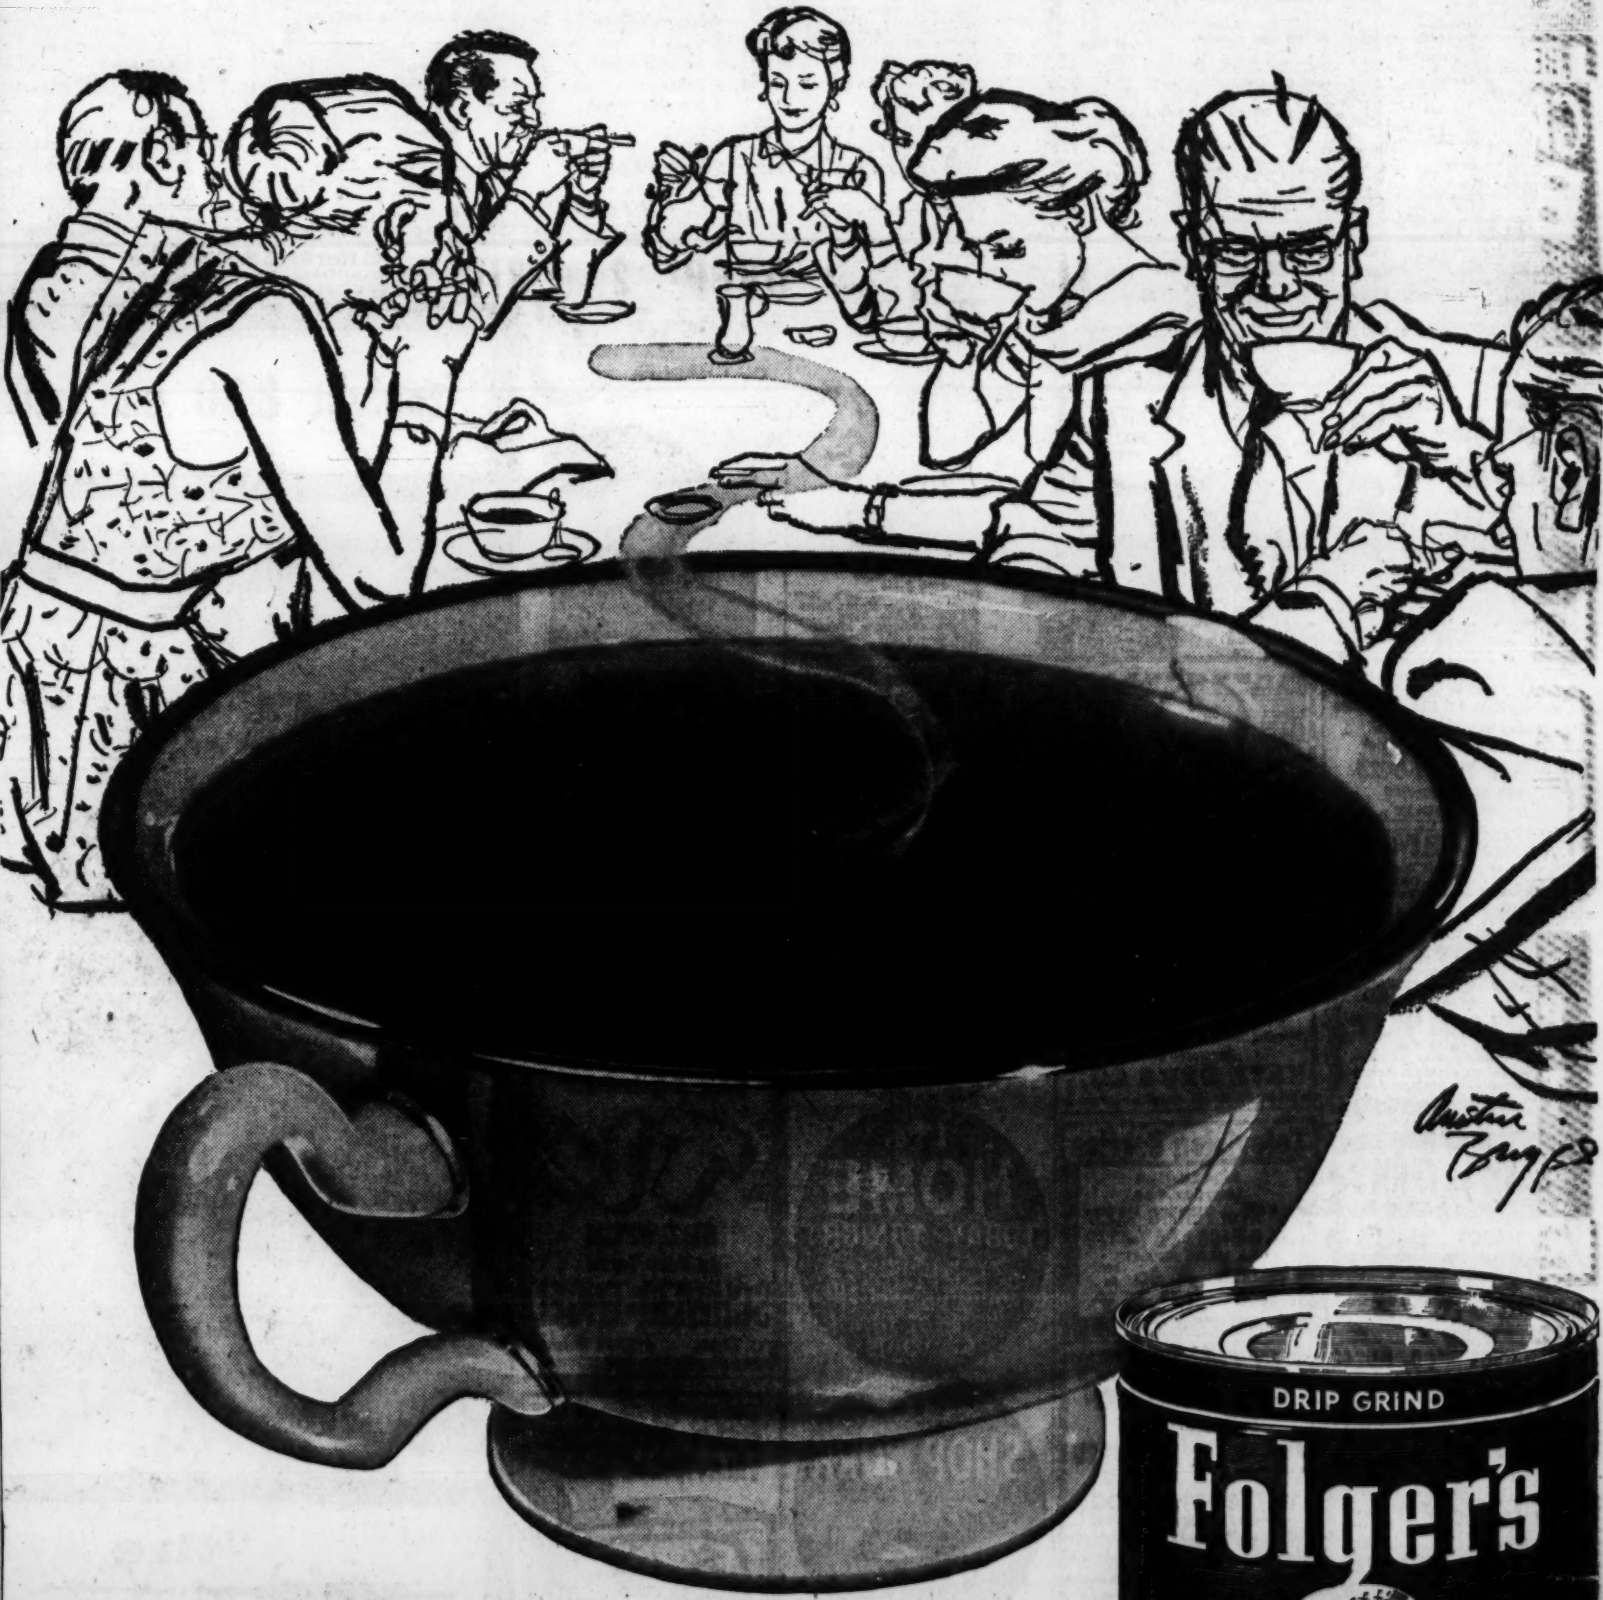

Folger's, you see, starts with only the choicest coffees . . . Mountain-Grown coffees that are naturally richer, heartier, more flavorful.

They blend and prepare these finer coffees in an unique way, with their century-old Folger "touch" that produces not only a richer flavor, but a truly distinctive flavor no other coffee can match. And because Folger's blends to a flavor, not to a formula, you can be sure of the same rewarding goodness cup after cup, day after day.

Why not serve your family the one coffee that over the years has been specially made to give you more flavor, more coffee satisfaction in every cup. Serve them Mountain-Grown Folger's. We think that once you've tried Folger's, you'll never be satisfied with anything less.

SO MUCH RICHER IN FLAVOR YOU ARE URGED TO USE 1/4 LESS THAN WITH LESSER FLAVORED BRANDS.

SHE DANCED at his Wedding

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER 10.

ALL week the dinner in honor of the newly-married couple hung over Donna like a black-out curtain shutting out the light. In a way it would be more difficult to face than the wedding. Laughter and confusion had prevented concentrated observation from anyone. Even when Donna and Peter danced she doubted if Arthur had noticed her. But Saturday night it would be different. Only six people would be there. Arthur's parents and their four guests. Peter and Arthur would talk shop and Donna, longing to join them, would be forced to carry on a feminine conversation with Enid and Mrs. Prentiss.

"It isn't fair," she complained to Peter on their way to the familiar house.

"Are you sure that's what is worrying you?" he asked.

She remembered then that he was in the same position and with a quick gesture of compunction her gloved hand touched his. "It will be an ordeal for both of us," she admitted. "But once it's over the situation may be easier."

"For all of us," he added. "Because I doubt if Enid and Arthur are looking forward to it to say nothing of his Mother and Father."

"It's just one of those things that has to be done, according to Mama Prentiss."

"Did she ask you to call her that?" Peter inquired.

"She suggested it years ago when Arthur and I were first engaged."

"He's married to someone else now," he reminded her. "And Enid isn't going to like it."

"Good," she said but, knowing he was right, she resolved not to use the affectionate title when Enid was present.

LIGHTS were streaming from every window to honor the newlyweds. Arthur's convertible was parked in the driveway.

"Chin up," Peter said. "And remember, we're in this together even if we're not married."

"At the moment I wish we were," Donna said recklessly. He smiled. "It's your fault we're not. We can be engaged if you like."

Donna shook her head. "That would be too obvious. They know we're not in love with each other."

"You're going to say that once too often," he warned, pressing the bell.

For one terrible moment Donna thought she was going to faint. Instead she heard herself crying. "Welcome home, Arthur."

"Greetings," he replied, "to both of you."

How handsome he was with the light shining on his blond hair. His lips parted with the familiar smile but his eyes begged her to be merciful.

"You're looking very beautiful," he said. Kissing her lightly, he drew her arm through his.

"I'm here too," Peter reminded him. "Your old sea-going pal, remember?"

Arthur threw his other arm about Peter's shoulder. "At the moment I'm more interested in this pretty girl you're with."

He was overdoing it, Donna thought, resenting his obvious attempt to placate her.

"Where's your wife?" she asked pointedly.

"Enid?" he said as if he had

WHEN someone uses the word "jet," we are apt to think of a special kind of airplane. Jet planes often move more than 13 miles a minute. Aside from that, we have an entirely different kind of jet. I am thinking of a black rock which is a variety of coal. There is an old saying, "as black as jet." It is hard to find anything which equals the blackness of jet.

People have made jet ornaments for thousands of years. The material is hard, but it can be cut without splitting. Hard coal will split easily, but jet can be cut without splitting.

Another value of jet is the fact that it can be handled without marking the fingers, or making smudges. Ordinary coal-blackens the skin of people who deal with it closely.

So far as is known, the first use of jet took place in the Bronze Age. In the Yorkshire area of Great Britain, bronze tools have been found deep in the ground alongside beads and other carved pieces of jet.

Yorkshire has provided most of the jet in Europe, but deposits exist in Germany, France and Spain. During the present century excellent jet has been found in the state of Utah.

Like ordinary coal, jet is made up largely of plants which were placed under pressure and hardened long ago. It is believed that deposits of jet found in the ocean bottom, off the coast of Yorkshire, were made from trees which floated down a river and sank after becoming water-logged. Later, it appears, mud slowly covered the dead trees at the bottom.

Jet necklaces are made at the present time, also jet buttons and toys. To a large extent, however, black onyx has replaced jet in the making of modern jewelry.

FORECAST
Low temperatures and areas of precipitation expected tonight.

The rain that fell early today in the St. Louis area was barely enough to wet the ground and streets, Meteorologist Harry P. Wahlgren reported. He said .02 inch was recorded in downtown St. Louis and .08 inch at Lambert-St. Louis Field. This brings the rainfall for the year to date to 22.89 inches, compared with 22.56 inches last year. Normal rainfall for the year to date is 28.75 inches. Total monthly rainfall is .66 inch.

This was making her second dramatic gesture. Ignoring Donna she walked straight to Peter Grant and kissed him. Not lightly as Arthur had kissed Donna but with a tender possessiveness.

"It's like coming home to see you, Pete," she said.
